

PROGRESS OF THE PANAMA EXPOSITION.

Great Progress Being Made on the Various Buildings and Their Decoration.

San Diego Calif.—The arrival of exhibits for San Diego's Panama California Exposition has started on a considerable scale with the receipt of important permanent features of the California State building. Eight of the great monuments of the Mayas, recovered from the ruins of the ancient city of Quirigua, are already on the grounds, heralding the later exhibits which will constitute some of the most valuable contributions to contemporary ethnological research.

The eight large pieces, the largest standing thirty feet and weighing approximately 1,000,000 pounds in the original sandstone, were discovered somewhat more than a year ago after painful and dangerous exploration of the jungle country of the Motagua valley in Guatemala, sixty miles from the coast. With the village located, the scientists' materials were brought over the International Railways then over a temporary tram, and then by pack, gang of natives with machetes forcing the way through the tropical jungle.

The city, dating back hundreds, possibly thousands of years before the Christian era, is believed to have fallen at about the time of the Roman Empire, but the relics discovered are so well preserved as to make the hieroglyphics easily translatable—if later research uncovers the key. The only points proved at present are that the Mayas people while possibly less fertile than the Aztecs or Incas, were further advanced in fact, in fact probably the peers of their contemporaries in Europe, Asia or northern Africa. The great monuments appear to be rulers in their theocracy, rather than deities. The dates 3975 and 3980 are found, but there is no key as to what event they chose as an era from which they dated their time.

It is worthy of note that in making the casts from the originals—the Exposition's explorers—mainly from the Smithsonian Institute and the School of Archaeology for the first time made use of the modern glue moulds instead of the old time plaster cast. By this means the finest hair lines of the hieroglyphics were preserved in tact, and transferred to the plaster are really more legible than on the original sandstone.

The eight great figures will stand in the rotunda of the State building, all artificially colored so as to represent accurately the originals in the Central American buried city. There is a vast amount of smaller exhibits brought from Quirigua with this shipment, and a little later more of the important display from Central and South America will arrive. It is possible the continued study of the relics which the Exposition has brought back to civilization may produce some vague understanding of the hieroglyphics before the display is formally presented to the public.

A dozen large panels, replicas of the famous group by Sallie James Farham in the Pan-American Union building at Washington, have arrived and are being set in the entrance to the rotunda of the California building at the San Diego Exposition. They are the only replicas the government has allowed to be made, and are already attracting wide attention among artists.

The panels show striking events in the early history of the western world, among them the discovery by Columbus, Balboa's arrival at the Pacific, the meeting of Champlain with the Iroquois, the triumphant marches of Cortez and Pizarro, scenes from the early days of Chile, and symbolic figures with ornamental work taken from the detail of the ancient nations' temples.

Another detachment of Indians from the San Ildefonso reservation will arrive next week at the San Diego Exposition to join the earlier arrival at the Painted Desert, which the red men are helping to construct. All the thatching of the Indian villages done by the Indians, and the enlarged delegation will have charge of placing the adobe on the frame work which has been rising for the last month and is now entirely ready for the outer coat. Several women and girls will be included in the coming detachment, all of them to remain, with Indians from the other tribes of plain and pueblo, throughout 1915 as an important part of the Exposition's native life.

More of the giant palms are being moved from the nurseries of the San Diego Exposition it on the broad space about the Botanical building and set as the largest pieces of the outdoor gardens. These gardens begin at the Prado, between the Home Economy and Agriculture buildings, extend back to the Botanical building, encircling a pool, continue about the building itself and run down to the canyon, one of the walks leading directly into the Japanese tea gardens which front on the Alameda. Some of the large trees, packed for shipment about the grounds, weigh in excess of 45 tons.

In all likelihood there will be a large exhibit of the U. S. Marine corps on the Exposition ground, Representatives of the service have made a second examination of the tract set aside for the government and have forwarded to Washington detailed recommendations. Apart from the Exposition, but in plain sight from the grounds, will be the enlarged aero field of the Army aviation corps, where maneuvering will be in progress through the year, San Diego harbor, incidentally, is the rendezvous for the Pacific fleet which has its base of supplies here.

LETTERS OF INTEREST

Referring to an Old Resident of This Town, who No Doubt Will Be Remembered By Many of Our Older Inhabitants.

Yoakum, Texas, July 14th 1914.

The Record, Gentlemen: While in Warren last year I caught the disease, so prevalent there among the good people, of living greatly in the past; were I not so busy I expect that I would be in this wise just like the people of my old home. I had a spell that I had contracted there, when I wrote the letter within, to which I hand you the reply. If I could, for my own amusement, I would write up the old Bronlow Hotel as I knew it. I lived near it and I know much of it that is of interest, for the most prominent men of N. C. used to come to it. It was a great place for the politicians of the State. I thought I would send you these letters and let you enjoy the uniqueness presented. Your paper comes regularly to me and I like it very much. I trust old Warren will have a good big crop this year.

Very sincerely,
DAN T. PRICE.

TAX COLLECTOR RETURNS.

E. C. Yellowley, in charge of the income tax collections in Oklahoma and Texas returned yesterday from Jackson, Miss., where he was summoned on account of the death of his father, J. B. Yellowlev, for years a prominent Mississippian.

Yoakum, Texas, June 18th, 1914.

Mr. E. C. Yellowley, San Antonio, Texas.

Dear Sir: I see by today's Daily Express that your father has died, and that you have returned from Miss. I think I knew a long time ago, your father, and not having heard from him since I have been in Texas, I am asking you did not your father go to school in Warrenton N.C. about the year 1868 and was he not a kinsman of Dr. Brownlow and the Edwards family living in Warrenton? Was not your father named Jim and did not the B. in his name stand for Brownlow—of this I am not sure? If I am right? I knew your father well, and he used to visit our home often and when he lived in Warrenton with Dr. Brownlow was a pupil at the Warrenton Academy. I went to school at the same time, but was much younger than your father. If I am right, I knew him well not only in the days referred to, but before, while the war was waging. He went to school then. When I was making out my income report sometime since, I saw your name, and determined to hunt you up, when in San Antonio, but when in San Antonio since, was in such a hurry had no time. I see you are still in the government service. I trust I will see you, when in San Antonio sometime. I am sorry to learn of the death of your father. At your convenience let me have a line from you.

With due respect,
I am very sincerely,
DAN T. PRICE.

San Antonio, Texas, July 11, 1914.

Honorable Dan T. Price, Yoakum, Texas.

My dear Mr. Price: On my return to this office after an absence of several days found your highly, appreciated letter of June 18th. The gentleman you referred to in your letter was my father, who died in Jackson, Miss., on June 6th.

Since receiving your letter I recall my father mentioning your name many times in connection with his early school days, all of which, were spent in North Carolina. Am satisfied you remember my father's Aunt Miss Ellen D. Brownlow, at whose home my father lived when he was quite a boy. Aunt Ellen is still living and resides in Raleigh. She will be 88 years old September 18th. She is a very remarkable woman for her age. I hear from her regularly and I will certainly take a great deal of pleasure in mentioning the fact that you had made inquiries of my father. Sometimes I may visit Yoakum and if I do I shall certainly look you up and when you visit this town, will be delighted to see you. My office is on the 3rd floor of the Postoffice building.

Hoping you are enjoying good health, am with great respect,
Very sincerely,
E. C. YELLOWBLY.

EMBRO ITEMS.

Mrs. Dallas Williams is ill at this writing we hope her speedy recovery.

A large crowd attended church at Embro Sunday where Rev. R. W. Bailey delivered an inspiring sermon.

Mrs. Ella King, of this place, returned home Thursday from Vaughan, where she has been visiting relatives and friends.

On July the sixteenth, the spirit of Miss Lucy Stallings passed from this world of cares into eternity. For some months she had been very ill, but none of her friends expected the summons would come so soon. She was a member of Brown's church for many years, had tried to serve her Lord and Master and is believed that she has gone to be with the loved ones who have gone on before.

Mr. Meals King, of Essex, was in Embro Saturday.

Mrs. T. M. Allen keeps quite ill.
