Horogra's Report—Stanton.
Washington, Jan. 7.—Howard's Stanton report takes the ground that Stanton favored the reconstruction acts, while the President evinced a disposition to disregard them, and, if possible, sense the reins of absolute power. This slartling purpose, on the part of Johnson, was the real ground of difference between him and Stanton. Stanton had the legal right to resignation, and circumstances justified his action.

The report combata all the President's positions, attempting to place him in the light of a
