

POETRY.

And while his harp responsive rung...
The Dying Boy.
BY THE LATE J. BUNTINGTON BRIGHT, Esq.

There's a deep affliction on my breast,
As if some heavy hand my bosom pressed.

When you look round and see a vacant seat,
You will not wait then for my coming feet.

"Father, I'm going home!
To that great house you spoke of, that blessed land,

"Sister, the young rose-tree,
That all the spring has been my pleasant care,

Morning spreads over earth her rosy wings,
And that meek sufferer, cold and ivory pale,

"Now, mother, sing the tune
You sang last night; I'm weary, and must sleep.

And when its roses bloom,
I shall be gone away—my short course run.

unredeemed by one feeling of remorse, one touch of pity, on the part of the perpetrator of the most abominable and disgusting debauchery.

The writer thus eloquently adverts to the Republic—the great hopes that concentrate in the rising generation:

"We live in an age of experiments
—a free people we are ourselves an experiment. Our excellent institutions seem to be no longer regarded as republican settlements, but as nurseries of future revolutions.

They are the very breathings of liberality, and lowliness, and prodigality.
