abolition of mechanical inspection of motor vehicles. Now the burden of the mail sack is for no new taxes, curtailment of unnecessary spending for any purpose, and demand that something be done about the highway accident rate. There is another difference, according to several old timers, in the type of letters. There is as yet no indication of organized or mass production of letters on the same subject. The letters this time bear more evidence of independent and individual authorship, and are therefore more influential upon the legislators receiving them.

BLOCKS—Undoubtedly there will be mass production later, but experienced members do not anticipate there will be same extent as in 1949, such things as two or three hundred and telegrams signed by different people, but exactly the same in content. This kind of pressure has not proven very effective in the past, but the practice enables the volunteer or paid promoters of certain schemes to make a good report to their clients.

TRICKS—Members of the general assembly develop tricks of their own trade to combat mass propaganda, and by use of key phrases or signs communicate with others. A round committee tables in such the same way tobacco auctioneers and mental telepathists get messages across. Holding up the right hand means one thing, holding up the left something else; there are numerous correct ways for addressing the chairman of a committee, and each can be given a meaning of its own—recognized only by those in a small group.

TRUSTEES—Some of the cutest codes ever devised have been used in connection with election of university trustees. Usually there are more than a hundred nominees for about thirty places on the board. A few leaders get together to pick out their favorites and have typed lists made of all nominees for convenience of the committee members. The gimmick comes with little things like putting a period after the favored names and no punctuation after the others. One year the word went down the faithful that they should vote for every person whose given name was spelled out, skip over those with initials only. Under that code "John L. Doe" would be favored, but "R. L. Doe" would not. Fact is the schemes worked pretty well for several years because the key was changed every time and was not discovered until after the nominations had been approved.

west of Kangnung and 32 miles south of the 38th Parallel—the 117th north of any 8th Army troops in Korea. The advance apparently was unopposed. A Communist platoon near the western end of the front penetrated almost to Ansong, 38 miles southeast of Seoul and 68 miles south of the 38th Parallel, it was engaged by an Allied patrol with unreported results.

4.—The South Korean Navy reported that South Korean civilian jeunese units recaptured the west coast town of Uihyu, 35 miles inside Communist North Korea and only 12 miles from Chinnampo, port for Pyongyang, the Red capital. The purpose of this behind the lines operation was not disclosed.

5.—B-29 Superfortresses bombed Pyongyang, the Communist capital, by radar through heavy anti-aircraft fire while more than 200 fighters raked Communist targets in clearing weather. The fighters concentrated on a fan-shape area south, southeast and southwest of Seoul, but Thunderjets also attacked two Red tanks northwest of Pyongyang.

KILLS TAKE BEATING

Chinese Nationalist sources in Tokyo said the Chinese Reds pulled Gen. Chen Yi's 3rd Field Army back into Manchuria to recover from the beating it took from the U. S. 1st Marine Division and other 10 Corps forces in northeast Korea last month.

The Chinese 3rd Field Army encircled units of the 1st Marine and 7th Infantry divisions around the Chosin reservoir, but the Americans battled their way 50 miles back to Hsinhung and Hungnam on the northeast coast and were vacated by sea with the rest of the 10th Corps.

KILLED SEVEN TO ONE
The 10th Corps estimated it killed or wounded seven to 10 Chinese and North Koreans for every American casualty during the battle.

The 1st Marine, 7th Infantry and South Korean 3rd and Capitol divisions—all members of the 10th Corps—subsequently landed in southeast Korea to buttress the 8th Army for the battles of southern Korea.

Before the withdrawal report was received, the Chinese 3rd Field Army was believed moving down the Korean east coast to join the 4th Field Army and North Korean units against the 8th Army.

Wellons

the agency for Harnett County. William S. Wellons recently attended a meeting of dealers and company representatives in Charlotte, where the men from the factory explained the new features of the tire.

TIRE IS TUBELESS
It is tubeless, and from the outside looks very much like any other tire. Inside, however, there is a layer of a special synthetic rubber which never grows hard, and this soft layer spreads to seal puncture holes. The chief cause of blow-outs—heat and friction between tube and tire—is eliminated, as the air inside the tire is in contact with the rim, and the rim spreads and disseminates heat.

When the tire is properly mounted on the rim, the tire edges are sealed, and the valve is sealed inside and outside the rim with rubber washers. Cost of the tire will run slightly higher than for the usual three-tube combination. The tires may be recapped.

When they are in use, the tires should be checked regularly by the dealer, Wellons said.
