Senate Group Kills Young's Whiskey Bill

RALEIGH, March 9-(P) The last chance for legislat ive approval of a statewide liquor referendum appear-ed dead today and moves to increase State revenue were dying at a rapid rate.

The Senate committee on propositions and grievances voted 8 to 2 to give unfavorable reports yesterday to a pair of referendum measures. Supporters of the bills failed to muster even the three votes necessary to file a minority report which would have given either measure a cetter chance of consideration by all the senators.

A minority report would have

A minority report would have made it possible to get the bill before the Senate with only a majority vote instead of the two-thirds vote necessary to pull it from the unfavorable calendar.

The committee turned thumbs down on a bill introduced by Sen. Wesley C. Watts of Lumberton as a companion to the already-defeated House referendum bill.

d House referendum bill.

The other rejected was that introduced by Sen. J. R. Young of Dunn calling for a vote to determine whether liquor stores would be banned in all countles or set up in every county.

CLEARED - Atmosphere around

CLEARED — Atmosphere around the General Assembly was cleared and sine die adjournment hastened by action of the House Appropriations Committee in approving the Senate street aid bill Wednesday. That means the bill is virtually assured of final enactment with only slight changes. Most of the arguments used for and against the measure in the fourth public hearing held in its behalf were repetitious. The new features consisted of specific open accusations instead of indirect whispers about pressure from administrative officials and unfair tactics of highway commission personnel.

Votes To Drop When Second Period Closes On Saturday

By Bill and Doris Gupton, Contest Editors

Every aggressive participant in The Daily Record's big "Everybody Wins" subscription contest should heed this timely warning. It is now a matter of hours, yes, precious hours, just a few more circuits of the hour hand, and then ten lete! Time will have abbed the hours will have then too late! Time will have ebbed, the hours will have passed, leaving only the question, "How did every serious contender for big prizes in the contest spend them?"

OPEN — Chairman Henry Jordan of the Highway Commission took a stronger position against the bill, and indirectly against any proposal for street aid, than he had Contestants themselves will have the answer to that important question. They, and only they, will know just what the last remaining hours in the "second period" of the contest mean toward the realization of their dreams, their ambitions to be the winner of the new 1951 Packard 4-Door Sedan, worth $2694.94, or second grand prize of $750 cash.

Today and tomorrow are the last two days to amass subscriptions and big votes while big votes are still allowed according to vote schedule that terminates this Saturday, March 10.

If the next few hours pass without speedy action on your part, the proposal for street aid, than he had at previous appearances. He said he came before the committee because he felt that as a State agency the Highway Commission had a duty to make recommendations to the general assembly, and he recommended the Powell bill be voted down as bad legislation.
