Turlington HD Club Holds May Meeting

Mrs. James Honeycutt and Mrs. Stuart Turlington were hostesses at the May meeting of the Turlington Home Demonstration Club. Present were 14 members and one visitor.

The devotional was conducted by Mrs. Turlington, after which the parliamentary procedure was carried out. The project reports were given by the ladies.

The lesson for the month, "Cooler in the Home?" was discussed by Miss Lela Huntley, assistant agent. She used slides to show the different arrangements of furniture and changing colors to make rooms look cooler.

After refreshments the club adjourned, to meet next on June 6 with Mrs. Namon Denning and Mrs. J. C. Hardee as hostesses.

Mr. and Mrs. William Turlington and family of Norfolk, Va., spent the week end with Mr. Turlington's mother, Mrs. W. H. Turlington in Dunn, Rt. 3.

Miss Marcia Stewart, who has been confined for two weeks with measles, is out again.

Miss Ann Turlington, who is a student at Peace College, spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Turlington.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Barbee and daughters of Winston-Salem spent the week end with Mrs. Barbee's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Turlington.

Phillip Morris' Johnnie Is Visitor In Benson

The world famous trade-mark of a popular cigarette company paid a visit to Benson recently and captivated many adults and about 400 pupils from the primary grades of the local school.

This charming visitor was none other than the diminutive Johnnie of the "This Is Johnnie" radio commercial whose picture is constantly before the public as he appears in his blue page boy uniform with trim of brass buttons and his red cap perched cunningly on one side of his head.

Johnnie arrived in Benson about noon and virtually "held court" in a local drug store which handles the product his company manufactures. He signed hundreds of autographs with a cheery smile and answered hundreds of questions. Once when he remarked that he would be going to Connecticut the following week a school boy asked if he would be going to see his girl friend Johnnie answered "I am going to see my best girl — my mom."

Fifteen years ago Johnnie was serving as page boy in an eastern hotel and by his courtesy and genial manner so impressed representatives of his present employers that he was offered the job of Good Will Traveling Ambassador for the company. He now has a life time contract and is said to be the only living trade mark of a business concern.

Johnnie has appeared in the legislative hall of North Carolina as a visitor. He was presented to the senators by Lieut. Gov. Pat Taylor. Many honorary titles have progress under the proposed plan includes such items as sound systems of farming and production of home food supply, practices like those mentioned would be discouraged.

NEED—One driving across North Carolina cannot fail to be impressed with the need for concerted community effort. It is gratifying to note evidence of attention to country church yards as contrasted with the eroded bare yards of a few years ago. Most of the churches have been painted or brick-veneered. School houses and yards also are more attractive. But there are still far too many ugly spots in these public places. There are places, too, where the effect of well kept farm yards, painted outbuildings and neat fences is destroyed by proximity of dilapidated premises, cluttered with broken down farm machinery. The casual traveler is impressed with evidence of individual improvements, and also with the dire need for community cooperation in such a campaign as is contemplated in the "County Rural Progress" idea.

LONG RANGE—While the presently offered prizes are for one year only, the program involves long range planning. It is proposed that Chairmanship of the sponsoring groups rotate among the several organizations, so that no one can get into position to claim major credit or make it an individual project to exclusion of others. Another implied purpose is to prevent what seems to be happening in some sections now with respect to abandoning long-time livestock and diversification farm programs in order to recoup income missed last year by reason of poor cash crops. An example of this attitude was afforded by a Cleveland County farmer the other day. Asked about his cattle and hog program, which had been noteworthy for some time, this man said he was giving less attention this year to hogs, cattle and pastures, and devoting full energy and available money to cotton in order to gain back losses last year by reason of boll weevil infestation. An eastern tobacco farmer said he had expected to reduce tobacco acreage this year and give some thought to beef cattle; but since it looked this might be a good year for tobacco and the next few years not so good, he had decided to postpone his cattle project for awhile and get all the cash possible out of the tobacco. Funeral services were held Wednesday at 3:30 p. m. from Sandy Grove Primitive Baptist Church. The Elder Luther Turner of Erwin and Elder T. Floyd Adams of been bestowed upon him, among them being honorary page boy for the house and senate in Washington, D. C., Kentucky Colonel, Lieut. Gov. on Governor's staff of Florida, and honorary army, navy, and air force recruiter. He has been cited by governors for his participation in bond drives and during the last world war was a dollar a year man for efforts in this channel.

The stop in Benson was on his itinerary during his spring tour of Southern states, the tour having started in Florida some weeks ago. Johnnie's brother, Ralph, drives the miniature, bright red English car in which the two travel to practically every city and many small towns in all of the states of the union. Johnnie has traveled some two million miles in his "ambassador of good will" capacity.
