Fowler Says Pirates May Have Settled Averagesboro

By LOUIS DEARBORN, Record Staff Writer. Averagesboro may have been originally settled by pirates, Malcolm Fowler, Harnett County Historian told a group at the meeting of the Men's Fellowship Club at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Erwin last night.

Fowler bases his conclusion on the fact that the only Aveyrs in this section were mentioned in 1786, while the name Averagesboro goes back to 1758 according to the records of old Barbours Church.

In 1719, however, Captain John Avery, a notorious pirate, and many of his crew, were hanged after a pirate nest at the mouth of the Cape Fear River was wiped out.

Fowler, guest speaker for the meeting, told the group he first became interested in the history of Averagesboro when he heard old-timers talking about the town when he was 12 years old.

When the town was incorporated after the revolution, Fowler stated, it bore the name of Averagesboro.

Old timers in the vicinity have related, Fowler said, that Joel Layton invited the committee to Raleigh and pled them with a potent concoction called "cherry bounce."

Fowler said it is hard to believe that Averagesboro was once a large town. However, he explained, it was at the head of navigation on the Cape Fear and the river was the highway to the sea.

He concluded by paying tribute to these highlanders, who, he said, did not wait for a government WPA, but went on fighting the river.

Postal Receipts Up 25 Per Cent. Receipts at the Dunn post office for the quarter ending September 30, 1951, amounted to $16,890.16.
