church board, expressed great regret at the resignation of Mr. Davis and paid high tribute "to the magnificent service which he has rendered throughout the years."

The announcement came today in the midst of an extended evangelistic campaign being held at the local church.

Mr. Davis is a native of Johnston County, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Davis. He grew up on a farm.

He attended a private school, then enrolled at the Old Turlington Institute at Smithfield. Later, he studied the ministry at the Rochester Bible School in Rochester, New York, and at Asbury Academy in Wilmore, Kentucky.

SERVED IN CALIFORNIA Mr. Davis came to Dunn in 1917 and has served the same church continuously since that time, except for a three-year leave of absence in California. He went to California for his health and while there served for a year as pastor of the Gospel Tabernacle in San Diego, California, and for two years as pastor of the Berean Bible School in that city. He then returned to Dunn.

Mr. Davis married the former Miss Emma Lee, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Erasmus Lee. The minister and his wife are the same age, born on September 23, 1878. They have one daughter, Miss Emma Lee Davis, a teacher in Hillsboro.

The Gospel Tabernacle has enjoyed steady growth and progress under Mr. Davis' leadership. When

Spencer Tracy And Pat O'Brien; Kid Pals, Now Play First Roles Together

After an off-the-screen association of thirty years, Spencer Tracy and Pat O'Brien are now appearing together for the first time.

Friends since childhood, the two actors have had remarkable parallels in their respective careers. Since achieving Hollywood stardom, however, their association has consisted chiefly of weekly dinners for the Erin equivalent of the long syne. O'Brien worked at the M-G-M studios once before in "The Blonde Bombshell" with the late Jean Harlow. But that was before Tracy had been adopted by Leo.

Naturally enough, it took an Irishman to bring these two Irishmen together professionally. They make their joint appearance in a fast-moving courtroom drama, title "The People Against O'Hara."

When Tracy read the script, he saw a perfect opportunity for O'Brien in the role of Ricks, policeman extraordinaire. And when one Irishman makes up his mind about another Irishman, and it all concerns a third character by the name of O'Hara, the outcome is obvious.

"I was all set for a New York night club stint," says O'Brien, "first at the Hotel Plaza, then at the Copacabana. But this guy Tracy is persistent. Never would take 'No' for an answer. There was a time, long ago, when he talked me into being ticket taker at the shows he'd give in the backyard of his house on Prospect Street in Milwaukee. The kids paid a pin to see the show. When it was over, they usually decided it wasn't worth a pin—and the riot started. It was always Spence, his brother, Carol, and me against the mob."

Born six months apart, Tracy in April and O'Brien in November, the two were a team from the start. They made their acting debuts together at the age of nine when they were cast (with grave doubts) as angels in a Christmas play staged by the Parochial School of the Gesu in Milwaukee.

"By the time we entered high school we had things figured out," says O'Brien. "It was Spence's idea that we join the school band. This got us into all the athletic events for free. I wasn't so hot on the instruments, but did a passable job on the bass drum. Spence, always one to do things in a big way, played the tuba."

Neither Tracy nor O'Brien had celebrated his 18th birthday when World War I crashed into being. Both were assigned to the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. O'Brien had his heart set on becoming a chief mate but he never made it until twenty-four years later, he was a chief gunner's mate insignia for a picture called "The Navy Comes Through."

When the war ended, the two friends enrolled at Marquette University. Becoming interested in the study of drama, they pooled their veteran pensions of $300.00 a month and became students at a drama school in New York City.

"Those were the days," recalls Tracy. "We roomed together in a 100 IN CAST The cast of "Going Places" includes about 100 people chosen from this town and surrounding communities. The show which has its setting in the main waiting room of a Union Depot is streamlined entertainment which "Packs" a car load of laughs and music from the time it sneaks into view with a fast high stepping chorus of Red Caps and "Going Places Girls" who mingle with the hustle and bustle of a typical crowd of people who are always to be found "going Places" in any railroad station. It gathers momentum and rolls merrily along at terrific pace, mingling songs, music, stunts, dances, and audience participation stunts until it finally whizzes to a stop with audience and cast cheering as it is climaxed with a colorful finale which salutes Hometown U.S.A.
