(Continued From Page One) Angier like to ride round and round a service station. Remember cars are not play things," he said. He had never heard of such going on any other place. Champion, 28, of Louisville, Route 2, contested a charge of speeding a truck in excess of 65 miles an hour near Lillington. He was fined $10 and costs. Patrolman G. R. Carroll, Jr. said he clocked him from Lillington to the Little River Bridge. Lonnie Lee Elliott, Negro, of Fayetteville, Route 6, pleaded guilty to driving without license, after being ordered to procure them at the time he received his license. He was taxed with the costs. Carrie Lucas of Erwin, found guilty of abandoning her minor children, was ordered to pay the costs, suspended upon the condition that she return home and care for the children. Hester Paul Johnson paid the costs for driving with improper lights. William Perry Campbell of Lillington, Route 3, was taxed with costs for driving with improper brakes. Board OK's

(Continued From Page One) The town would remove the parking meters at the site of his proposed filling station, at town expense. The expense of removing the curbing and trees, however, must be borne by E. C. Edgerton, who is building the station. With regard to curbing on the highway he was told to consult the Highway Department, and the light pole must be moved by the Carolina Power and Light Co. Warren pointed out that the street light would not be needed with the station lighting up. C. T. Latimer, secretary-treasurer of the zoning board, recommended the re-zoning of lot 39, Jackson Heights addition, in order that O. W. Godwin might build a store there. The board will advertise and if there is not objection will re-zone. City Manager O. O. Manning told the board that there had been numerous requests for valley gutters and that a deal had been arranged with Zeisler-Cline Construction Co., whereby these could be put in at small costs, if more than two miles were ordered. Cost would be 60 cents per lineal foot for 3 foot width; 75 cents per lineal for 4 foot width; and 95 cents per lineal foot for 5 foot width. As far as the individual landowner is concerned, their payment would include all grading, asphalt, labor and tools to complete the work. The City Manager is planning to contact the property owners to see if enough persons want this work done to make it worth while. ARMORY PROBLEM G. R. Smith reported that a survey he had made under the Armory, accompanied by the City Manager, showed the floor joists were termite eaten to a degree that was dangerous. Termites had eaten tubes as big as a thumb through the joists and could be caught by the teaspoonful he reported. Manning corroborated his findings. "Instead of the joists holding the flooring up the flooring is holding the joists up," he asserted. He said there were 22,000 square feet of space under the building. City Attorney I. R. Williams pointed out that legally the town board could not authorize the expenditure of more than $1,000 without bids. The board decided that due to the unsafe condition being such that repairs constituted an emergency, the board would accept his offer to treat the building for $1,200 subject to the law. For this sum, he is to terminate the building, replace faulty joists, and install tile drains. Material for all but the termite control and the labor for ditching is to be furnished by the town. The board read the letter from Mrs. E. P. Davis, who asks that the school sign be removed stating that it is still two and one half feet on her property. The sign has been moved three feet from its original location and the City Manager insists that this removes it to the right-of-way. The City Manager has received much favorable comment since the action of this sign for the salutary effect it has on speeding motorists. It was contributed by McLamb Farm Machinery Co.

General Ike (Continued From Page One) and SHAPE Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers in Europe. ENTERTAIN AT BRIDGE Eisenhower and his wife entertained a small group of friends at dinner and a bridge game in the general's hotel suite last night. The guests included Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson and White House intimate George Allen, who said it was "just a bridge game." Sen. James H. Duff, R., Pa., a leader of the Republican Eisenhower-for-President bloc, had not seen the general, although he said last week that he would contact Eisenhower while he was in town; Eisenhower said he would be glad to see Duff as an old friend. The only apparent break Monday in the fog surrounding Eisenhower's political thoughts occurred when newsmen asked him if he would let anyone talk politics on his trip. The 61-year-old general replied: "No, not just now." But whether this meant that Eisenhower would accept a nomination for President next year was anybody's guess. He told reporters Monday that he had given no one authority to undertake any political activity in his behalf. Some of Eisenhower's GOP supporters apparently felt that the general does not give at least a private nod of such authority; it might be possible to overtake the running start of Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio, the only announced candidate for the Republican nomination.
