CLEANING TABLE — Shown here is the final stage in the processing of fowl at the new plant put into operation by J. Leon Kodwin and Charles Wade. Godwin, is an interested observer at the rear of the table while W. H. Curlin, at his right, explains the fine points of the operations to two employees. The chickens are passed through the opening at the far left from the picking machine in the adjoining room. Fine spray jets over the table are used for washing the cleaned birds. The stainless steel table is easily cleaned and kept sanitary. (Daily Record photo by Louis Dearborn).
