CEASE-FIRE AGREEMENT REACHED

Ratification Is Expected On Sunday

PANMUNJOM, Korea. — (UP) — United Nations and Communist negotiators agreed today on a "cease-fire by subcommittee" plan.

A joint subcommittee finally settled a formula for setting the cease-fire line—the issue that had stalled the Korean truce talks for four months. It was the biggest step forward since the armistice terms are settled within 30 days, the cease-fire line shall move forward or back to the battleline existing when the complete armistice is ready for signature.

Will Finish by Saturday

Ma. Gen. Henry L. Hodges, chief U.N. subcommittee member, said staff officers of the two sides already have agreed on a location of one-third of the present 135-mile battleline and predicted they would finish their work by Saturday afternoon.

If so, the subcommittee will submit its agreement to the full armistice negotiating committee Sunday for ratification—expected to be only a formality.

The 30-day period will begin with ratification of the agreement. It will give a green light to negotiators to seek a speedy solution to the remaining three items on the armistice agenda:

- 1. Composition, authority and functions of an organization to supervise compliance with the armistice terms.
2. Arrangements relating to prisoners of war.
3. Other recommendations to governments of both sides.

U.N. sources believed the Reds, no less than the Allies, will be anxious to complete the armistice terms by Christmas because the 30-day clause would nullify any further U.N. attempts to force Communist North Korea in that case.

However, allied optimism was tempered by the knowledge that both the supervision and prisoner-of-war questions present problems which easily could snarl the truce talks for months to come.

READ THE NEXT LINE — That is what license examiner Ed Wade is asking this fair applicant for a driving license. The machine she is gazing into is the Ortho-Rater, the latest method used to determine how efficiently the applicant's eyes will perform for driving.

New Gadget Helps Many Get Licenses

Wade has been examining applicants ever since he released from the service. During that time he has issued licenses to motorists with one arm or leg and with but one eye, but most of these cases call for restrictions such as signal lights, automatic clutch or other special devices.

If you are planning to apply for a license, Wade advises, read the handbook supplied to you thoroughly before taking the examination.

During the four years that he has been in the lower right hand corner of the expiration date.

Every license now held by a North Carolina motorist bears this date and the motorist is allowed to renew his license within 60 days before or 30 days after the expiration date.

Now, however, the situation has been changed, and Wade is able to handle all applicants with more facility. In case of a weak point of applicants, he can recommend the aid of one of the Highway Patrolmen to make the test with the applicant.

There are bad drivers among both men and women, he says. About one-fourth fail on the first test but they usually pass on the second attempt.

But when all the shooting was over, boy, that's when I got scared, said John Bradshaw Jr.

Steady nerves and accurate shooting saved the young woodsman when he accidentally allowed into the den of three bears while deer hunting near Danbury, Wis.

He said he was hunting alone when he tried to jump across what he thought was a small hole, but instead stumbled and landed on something soft.

HST Prepares For Fight On Foreign Policy

WASHINGTON (UP) — President Truman was reported today to be arming himself for a whale of a fight on foreign policy if Republicans make it an issue in the 1952 political campaign.

Mr. Truman said he hopes a bitter, partisan wrangle on foreign affairs can be avoided in the national interest. But his advisers said he might as well expect the worst.

GATHER AMMUNITION

Administration leaders already are gathering ammunition to meet the GOP attack in the belief, as the President put it, that foreign policy "will be the best issue the Democratic party has."

Secretary of State Dean Acheson may enter the campaign, but present strategy calls for him to stay behind the scenes and let less controversial spokesmen present the Democratic case.

Meanwhile, State Department officials have been studying the foreign policy statements of Republican presidential candidate Robert A. Taft.

BARRED BY HATCH ACT

The department is barred by the Hatch Act from getting involved in politics. But officials said this doesn't prevent it from checking Taft's statements for "factual errors" and possible "misrepresentations."

The State Department formerly never was very quick to reply to its critics. But it discovered during the 1950 elections that this policy didn't pay off. It now vigorously defends its actions against any and all attacks.

Boy, 17, Kills Three Bears In Five Shots

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UP) — A 17-year-old high school boy who killed three bears with five shots from a .30-30 said today he "didn't have time to get scared" when the animals charged him.

"But when all the shooting was over, boy, that's when I got scared, said John Bradshaw Jr.

Steady nerves and accurate shooting saved the young woodsman when he accidentally allowed into the den of three bears while deer hunting near Danbury, Wis.

He said he was hunting alone when he tried to jump across what he thought was a small hole, but instead stumbled and landed on something soft.

CHARGED BY 475-POUNDER

A 475-pound bear came roaring and clawing out of the hole behind him, John said. One swipe of the bear's paw ripped a hole in his hunting coat and tore his shoe.

"I slipped the safety on my rifle and swung around to see what the bear was up to," he said. "I was right into its mouth."

His first one shot into the bear's mouth and drove it back a few feet.

The boy said he had been hunting against a low and set down. A second infuriated bear roaring in from his right side.

"I grabbed my rifle and fired," he said. "I hit the bear in the chest and sent it reeling. The bear then charged at me."

"I was standing in the hole when the bear charged at me," he said. "I fired one shot into the bear's mouth and drove it back a few feet."
