GAINES WULLENWABER

This boy's daddy may be famous for his "Ham", but you can bet his son is no "Ham." This youngster is a mighty fine one, and there's no "ham" about anything he does. Know who he is? Meet Gaines Wullenwaber, son of Al Wullenwaber of Colonial Foods Locker "Ham" fame. His mother is Frances Wullenwaber, who has one of the prettiest voices in town. She says Gaines can't sing—well Mrs. Marks thinks he can—at least he sure does over here—and it sounds pretty too. Gaines likes the rough and tumble games, but he can also enjoy other kinds too. He makes mighty pretty things out of blocks, and it wouldn't surprise us if he might be a construction engineer some day. Still he sure does like airplanes, so he just might decide to fly one of those fast planes he talks about. Let's hope tho' it will be for a peaceful mission when Gaines gets old enough to choose a career.

Gaines plays hard, works hard, and enjoys doing both. He has learned to share his things, this mighty hard to please Mrs. Marks (he does too), and has a mighty nice disposition. He is going to make a smart first grader next year.

was recently constructed in another county.

SHOWN BLUEPRINTS
He showed the group blueprints of similar structures, in process of building or under construction. The Commission's architect, Bruce K. Jones, who was also present, explained the layout to the group. "The idea of government aid in these health centers is rather new," he explained. "Up until recently, health departments had occupied whatever quarters they could find, usually a room or two tucked away somewhere in the courthouse. These buildings are designed to afford the maximum of service, based on ideas worked out since the end of the war."

"Be sure there is plenty of land," Dr. Ferrell advised, "then as the scope of public health broadens, you can expand the facilities." He said the Commission would send a representative to Dunn to study the proposed sites, if the project meets with their approval.

"Once you get the land and the basic building," Dr. Ferrell pointed out, "the cost of additional rooms would not be prohibitive, gently interested and have the necessary capital and a sincere desire to be in business for yourself, WRITE AT ONCE, giving age, address and phone number to arrange for a local interview. even if further Commission funds were not available."
The building and the land would be county owned, Dr. Ferrell said, subject only to the provision that it used to be used as a health center for the 20 year period.
The proposed site, Dr. Ferrell said, was, in his opinion, a good one. "I think," he said, "it is a good idea to have a health center near a high school and in close proximity to a hospital. Often the use of hospital facilities is an asset."

this subcommittee," King said.
The case yesterday afternoon caused the sudden resignation of Charles Oliphant, who got $14,800 a year as chief counsel of the revenue bureau. He wrote to President Truman saying he could not take it any more. Oliphant called the shake-down story "fantastic and irresponsible" and blasted the committee for even listening to it.

OUT FOR SHAKEDOWN
The White House said Mr. Truman would accept the resignation. Oliphant will go before the House group himself to tell his side.
Tittlebaum had said Nathan connected Oliphant with a "clique" which was out to shake down tax-delinquents. Nathan said the Chicagoan's story was "a dirty filthy lie."
