Edmond O'Brien, Yvonne De Carlo Star In Spectacular Action Film

Paramount's "Silver City" a Technicolor drama about a colorful 19th century mining center and the rough and tumble fortune seekers who dug, slugged and killed to win their share of the precious ore, will open on Sunday at the Dunn Theatre. Based on a Saturday Evening Post story by Luke Short, this fast-paced adventure stars Edmond O'Brien, Yvonne De Carlo, Barry Fitzgerald, Richard Arlen, Gladys George and Laura Elliot in some bold and desperate doings played out in America's richest silver country.

Producer Nat Holt took his cast and crew to picturesque Tuolumne City in California's High Sierras for location filming. The more modern building front on the town's main streets were revamped to look as they did in the brawling 1870's of the story, and tons of dirt were tamped over the paving to represent the main stem of a frontier town. Other location sites were the wooded hills above towns, an old-fashioned saw mill, an abandoned mine and a mountain railway.

O'Brien appears as a mining company assayer who rigs a silver holdup, later squares things in an explosive series of episodes that brings him over to the right side of the law and into the arms of a fiery frontier miss. The popular star, who has recently come in for a large share of outdoor rough stuff, was last seen in Nat Holt's production of "Warpath" as a trouble-hungry cavalryman, will shortly be seen as a railroad troubleshooter in Holt's "The Denver & Rio Grande."

Miss De Carlo, the lithe lovely who first achieved screen prominence as a snake-bitten charmer, in "Salome, Where She Danced," plays the spiffy boss of a rugged mining crew. Veteran character actor Barry Fitzgerald, who won an Academy Award for his performance in "Going My Way," portrays a conniving mine owner, and Richard Arlen appears as a prospector harried by claim jumpers and a roving-eyed wife.

"Silver City" was directed by Byron Haskin, whose recent assignments include "Warpath" and "Treasure Island." Ray Rennahan, voted Academy Awards for his lens work on "Gone With The Wind" and "Blood and Sand," was the cinema-photographer.
