used to be operated in America by Germans, brings in our local mystery man, Henry Grunewald, who's been in the toils of the House tax investigators. Turns out that Henry used to work for the Alien Property Custodian and also (for what it's worth) that he once was a prohibition agent. He was tracking-down illicit quizers, apparently, before he ever got around to taking out American citizenship papers. So far, he's not talking.
Sen Edwin C. Johnson (D. Colo.) and boys are peering deep into the surplus ship deals of Joe Rosenbaum and others, some of whom were indicted the other day on charges of telling lies about their business with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.
There are rumors, which I haven't yet been able to track down,

Dunn High Juniors Plan Stunt Night

The Junior Class of Dunn High School has set Thursday night, January 10, as Stunt Night, 1952. This affair, sponsored annually by the Junior Class, is one of the highlights of the school year.
In addition to the stunts presented by the home rooms of the high school and the three eighth grades, there will be voting on superlatives, a baby contest, and a talent contest in which prizes will be awarded for the best individual stunts.
In past years, Stunt Night has proved entertaining for young and old alike, and this year will be no exception. So come on out and support the Juniors. "We'll see you, at Stunt Night, '52".

that other Senators are looking into sharp practices of certain Federal housing officials. And that brings us to the Agriculture Committee and the wholesale case of the missing breakfast food.

The Commodity Credit Corporation, you know, is in the business of buying up corn, wheat, cotton, linseed, and not telling what all else by the thousands of tons in order to keep up the price of same. This stuff has got to be stored. So the CCC has rented space in grain elevators and storage depots across the country. Now it turns out that some of the storage fellows casually have been selling the taxpayers' food, as if it were their own. Nine of them so far have been taken to court on charges of peddling grain that belonged to the rest of us. One of them is accused of building false floors in his elevator and sprinkling a little corn on top to fool the inspection house. That's the job the veterans gave him!

WINNIE IN MOMENT OF RELAXATION

BRITAIN'S PRIME MINISTER, Winston Churchill, presents a picture of relaxation as he settles back in his limousine, lights up a cigar, and waits to be taken to 10 Downing Street in London. He had just returned from conferences in Paris with General Dwight Eisenhower and other Allied leaders on North Atlantic Treaty Organization plans. (International) are good about "African Queen" with Bogart and Hepburn. The film was fashioned around two smoking car gags... While starring in "The Heart of Rome" (in Italy) Ermano Randi was shot dead by a jealous suitor when the picture was almost completed. The producers were ready to scrap it when they found a young American actor, John Foston, an almost double for the slain star... The long-ago film, "Scarlet Street," concerned a husband who slew his bride's lover. It starred Joan Bennett.

The Press-Box: For your collection of Bitter Contrasts: Rudolph Hess, the Nazi war criminal behind British bars, was presented with a turkey dinner Christmas Day. Our soldiers at the Korean front didn't get turkey sandwiches!... The passing of Dr. G. H. Bennett had an ironic touch. He was director of the Four Point program for foreign aid. While he worked to save human lives Bennett was virtually unknown. When he perished in a plane crash his name made the page ones... The President continued his rage against the U. S. press but his Administration does nothing about deporting the Tass Agency reporters back to Moscow... Mr. Truman fights AP while the rest of us keep fighting Pravda... It was to be expected that a 10th rate power such as Hungary would insult Americans by demanding ransom for our kidnapped fliers. Considering how often Washington appeased criminals in Spain and Argentina... Editors wonder whom Truman will give the job of cleaners into believing his place was filled.

Several other similar cases are under investigation and the alleged fraud is said to amount to a good many millions. Before next year gets a good start, you'll be hearing more about every one of these items. Much more, probably.

The Plays: Sir Laurence Olivier and his lady fair, Vivien Leigh (Britain's Mr. and Mrs. Theatre), arrived at The Ziegfeld in the Shakespeare - Shaw "Cleopatra," with a whopping advance sale of $1,000,000. The build-up was Coronation-like and the premiere were the season's top gals... Veteran first-nighters rated The Bard's version the best of the two, with reviewers agreeing the attraction is the Oliviers, whose histrionics are always thrilling no matter the opus. The critics welcomed them with great passion... Henry Fonda's new hit, "Point of No Return," played to standees in its first week... "The King and I" was one of the few unaffected by the pre-holiday slump... "Guys and Dolls" attracted capacity... Newcomer "Is and Behold" will try to hold on... The comedy, "Glad Tidings," a messy, challenging the critical majority, who weren't impressed. It hasn't had a losing week... It has been a strange season. It recorded a new low in number of premieres (36), which offered only two musicals.

In the Wings: Alex Woolcott, the drama critic who turned actor, had just closed in a dismal Theatre Guild play... Novelist Sinclair Lewis opened in a drama that flopped fast, too... Woolcott sent Lewis this premiere night wire: "Greetings from one exhibitionist who knows he can't act to one who thinks he can"... George S. Kaufman, one of the pillars on teevy's "This Is Show Business," panned television one night right before the cameras... "If you don't like teevy," said Clifton Fadiman, "why do you appear here every Sunday night?"... "Because," said George, "I turn the money over to a very poor family—of which I am the head."

The Cinemagicians: Fredric March's stirring playing in "Death of a Salesman" records every web of the compelling tragedy... "Star-111" is a pleasant musical with several gay specialties... "Whistling Hills" serves the usual prairie dish. Oats and corn... An Italian import called "Miracle in Milan" was rated a superb comedy fantasy, with one observed noting that it makes the spirit dance to the music of laughter... "Flame of Araby" has lovely Maureen O'Hara as the flame who warms Jeff Chandler's heart. A passable adventure... "The Bushwhackers" doesn't even merit this notice... "Decision Before Dawn" lived up to the advance heralds. An exciter that clutches attention like a shriek in the night.

"I figure a little over $100,000," Tate reported.
"Will you tell us in summation how much money came into your hands for use in the candidacy of Senator Taft for re-election in 1950?" broke in Chairman Guy Gillette, Iowa Democrat.
"Approximately $300,000 estimated Tate."
"When you made your report... why did you not report the sums that you had received up to approximately $300,000?" demanded Gillette.
"Because the Subsidiary Committee of ours, I gave the money to them, and they reported it," alibied Tate.
"You hope they reported it corrected Gillette."
Note—The same Ben Tate is again collecting huge sums for the senator's presidential campaign. It's a fair question to ask: "How much is going into his private safe deposit box, and what bookkeeping methods are used to keep track of the money?"
