securing pledges enough from prospective donors to warrant the trip here. In order to spend a day here, the bloodmobile would have to be assured of securing a minimum of 250 pints of blood. This, it is estimated, would require the pledges of about 400 prospective donors.

The majority of the executive committee members present held a dim view of this possibility, and, although she has had frequent inquiries about the possibility of donating blood from citizens of this section, executive secretary, Mrs. Grace Swain, was frankly pessimistic.

Approval of the medical fraternity, she dismissed as a minor obstacle, "Dr. Corbett," she said, "has attended two or three of the meetings at Charlotte in regard to the blood program, and he assured me that the doctors would approve."

DAVID BLACKMAN

David Blackman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Blackman and this is his second year over here. He is a great big boy, and if he doesn't stop growing he is going to be so tall he will bump his head on our low ceilings over here before next May when he graduates to First Grade at the Grammar School.

David likes to build all kinds of things. Here he has just finished making a cannon. He likes airplanes and trains, too. Santa Claus brought him an electric train last year, and this year he got a transformer, more track, and lots of other additions to his train. He also got a truck that has real lights, which burn when you put a battery in.

David has grown up a lot since he started to school here last year. He is a hard worker, is unselfish, and looks for things to do to help us over here. He is quite talented in art, dramatics and singing.

Lately he has had to use a lot of will power. He is allergic to chocolate, so when we get a piece of chocolate candy he always has to say, "no, thank you." But Mrs. Marks can usually find another kind, so it isn't too bad for him! He is going to a good doctor, so all of us are expecting him to get welland eat most anything he likes some of these days!
