Later Mrs. Matthews invited everyone into the dining room for refreshments.

The table was covered with a white cloth and centered with the pretty white, pink, green and yellow birthday cake topped with three pink candles.

After the children had sung "Happy Birthday" and little Jessie had blown out the candles, Mrs. Matthews served cake, potato chips, cookies and lemonade with colored ice cubes. Cellophane bags of corn candy were given as favors.

tribes up there and become eligible for some rights in connection with this oil?"

"You want to be adopted there?" asked Chairman Joe O'Mahoney, Wyoming Democrat.

"We have already been adopted," explained Murray.

"Senator, I don't believe they discovered oil since you and I have been adopted in those particular tribes," suggested Ecton. And the subject was dropped.

LEASES IN A HAT
New Mexico's Senator Anderson then broke in with his complaint about the oil-lease lottery.

"May I just bust out here now and say I think the drawing they had at Santa Fe was the most disgraceful thing that the Department of Interior has conducted for a long time," he protested. "Undoubtedly, the government could have gotten millions of dollars for leases put up for sale."

"One filling-station operator at Santa Fe drew two numbers out of the hat for leases," added Anderson. "Strangely, the men knew in advance that they were the good pieces of ground, and this filling-station operator has two $20,000 leases just by having the numbers picked out of the hat. I think that is going pretty far."

The New Mexico Senator demanded that the Interior Department "be required to come up here and tell us whether this is a 'modern, progressive way of handling oil.'"

"I think," he snorted, "if they did the same thing for the Indians in Montana, it would be terrible."

Chairman O'Mahoney promptly agreed that he "would be disposed to call upon the interior Department to come up and report to us both with respect to the handling of these new Indian lands and the system mentioned by Senator Anderson."
