PALACE GUARD LOVES LUSHNESS
The same day that President Truman announced he was staying in the New Hampshire primary, Gould Lincoln, grave political writer of the Washington Star, published a long diagnosis of Senator Kefauver's campaign plan, indicating that Truman might be snowed under by a young Senator from Tennessee.

Members of the White House staff immediately clipped the Lincoln story, took it to their boss. The story was calculated to make him see red, also to goad him into running again.

This is probably the greatest danger in the current jockeying for position inside the Democratic Party—namely, that the President who gets mad easily and shoots from the cuff, may decide to run not because of any considered thinking, but because he has his dander up.

This undoubtedly is what members of the Palace guard have in mind when they put exactly the right newspaper clippings on his desk. If he doesn't run, they are out of the cushiest, most glamorous jobs they have ever had in all their lives, and ever will have. People in that position don't give up easily.

Carlyle Appoints Charles Collier
Congressman F. Silvio Carlyle advised The Daily Record this morning that he has recommended Charles Eugene Collier for appointment as permanent rural mail carrier at Linden.

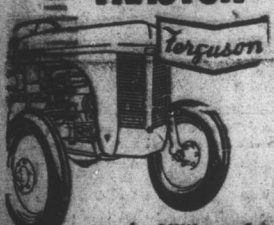

Mr. Carlyle said only two names were submitted to him on the eligible list, that of Mr. Collier and Hugh Watson Blalock, who has been serving as temporary carrier.

Congressman Carlyle said Collier was given preference for being a veteran. He said Mr. Blalock had rendered splendid service in the office.
