flag, pleaded innocent today to charges of mailing "scurrilous" postcards.

JACKSON (P) — Gov. Hugh L. White granted an indefinite suspension of sentence yesterday to T. H. Sharp, 50, former mayor of Columbus who was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1950 for the murder of a neighbor. Officials said Sharp is seriously ill and not expected to recover.

LONDON (P) — U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson arrived here by plane today to attend the funeral of King George VI and try to smooth out Franco-German differences which already have delayed the formation of a West European Army.

PHILADELPHIA (P) — A presidential poll conducted by the Philadelphia Inquirer today showed Sen. Robert A. Taft (R-O), the readers' choice by a nearly two-to-one majority.

CHICAGO (P) — Matthew Capone, the "good" kid brother of the scarface hoodlum who once had Chicago "sewed up tight," dug deep today to raise $10 bond after he was picked up for questioning in the slaying of politician Charles Gross.

LAKEWOOD, N. J. (P) — Two thousand acres of land would be made available here for an airport for use in case nearby airports were closed in by weather, under a resolution passed by the township committee.

NEW YORK (P) — Newark Airport was padlocked today for the duration of a congressional investigation of the three Elizabeth, N. J., plane crashes that took 117 lives within two months.

WASHINGTON (P) — A furniture manufacturer, Walter J. Spainhour of Lenoir, N. C., told a Senate subcommittee today that the Army refused to boost his contract price for desks, then went out and bought desks at a higher price and sued him for failing to deliver cheaper ones.

RALEIGH (P) — Gov. W. Kerr Scott told the State Farm Bureau Federation convention today that public dams and flood control are the next "great projects" which must be undertaken in North Carolina.

Chamber

(Continued from page one) Coordinating the efforts of men who have varied interests and points of view is a challenging job, but the community building achievements of Chambers of Commerce prove that it can be done. They have demonstrated that effective teamwork in attaining sound, continuous community development requires that the "whole team" be in the game. It is our hope that the present membership drive will put more people on the team and help the Chamber of Commerce do an even better job for this community.

Billy Graham

(Continued from page one) with his byline. Meanwhile, Hamilton, author of the story, stuck to his position that it was received from sources which he regarded as absolutely unimpeachable. HAMILTON GIVES SOURCE Adams wired Hamilton for an explanation yesterday and received the following wire: "Graham tells story of his conversation with Truman to three Senators at Smith luncheon and information given to us by Jesse Helms. As corroboration Rep. I. Mendel Rivers of South Carolina tells the same story all over Capitol Hill and says Graham personally told it to him." Adams said he sent the wire to The News and Observer, but that the Raleigh paper did not see fit to publish Hamilton's substantiation of facts. "If so happens," declared Adams, "that Hamilton was a staunch and rabid Frank Graham supporter in last year's campaign and I am sure he would not go out of his way to reflect on Dr. Graham or to boost Willis Smith." OVER-EMPHASIZED The Dunn newsman said he thought the whole incident was being emphasized beyond its importance and added: "As I see it, it is of little consequence whether or not Billy Graham actually voted for Willis Smith, even though he says his father and other members of his family did. Mr. Graham was out of the State at the time and could not vote. The important thing is that a great majority of North Carolinians voted for Willis Smith," he added.

Duke Arrives

(Continued from page one) The king and I have been very close," Windsor said. "We know each other well. The outstanding qualities of kingship he possessed made easier for me the passing on of the uninterrupted succession to the throne. So as we mourn a much beloved monarch our hearts go out to the widowed queen mother and her two daughters in their grief. The queen, Elizabeth, has by now been called upon to succeed her father. His well-known attributes will, I am sure, descend to her." He left for London to stay with Queen Mary until the funeral. It will be Windsor's first official appearance in any capacity in this country since he abdicated the throne in 1936 in favor of the then Duke of York.

Atop the casket are the Imperial State Crown, the Royal Orb and the Royal Sceptre.

No Time For Tourist Goal

(Continued from page one) return. And you are afraid for yourself because it is you upon whom the child depends. It is far easier to indulge the little rascal and, you think, humoring. "Oh well, might as well give in just a little this time. After all, think of what he's been through." That's just it. If you stop to think of what he has been through and argue that it was a perfectly harrowing experience which entitles him to some special consideration, salaaming and rolling out the plush carpet for the rest of his life, that youngster will catch on quickly. He will be the first one to agree with you. And then you have opened the door to neuroticism. "I'm going to have you fired," said the Little King one afternoon to a new nurse on the second shift. He didn't like the way she handled the matter of the bedpan. "Poole, we learned, are that way. Irritable beyond belief. If Chuck asked for the bedpan and it was a few minutes late in arriving, he'd sob in frustration. It was this mental attitude that we were called upon to cope with, and it was no easy task." In the case of this particular nurse, she quit before we had a chance to get in a handle with her. The doctor made light of this incident. "It's tough being a special-duty nurse on polo," he said, "and I suspect she just wanted an excuse to get away." Chuck's next nurse on that shift was—excuse the English—an old crowd. Well done on both sides. Try as we would we couldn't like her. She had a sharp eye and a tongue to go with it. An eagle beak and nonrimmed glasses topped off the effect. Norma brought her a box of choice candies, hoping it would soften her up. It was a waste of money. She barreled through her work with gimlet-eyed ferocity; the sooner it was done, the better. Chuck had brightened up one morning and regained some of the old alertness. He looked up at me hopefully. "Could you bring Skipper down tonight and let him look at me through the window?" he asked. We didn't see why not. "That would be nice," said Cal, our day nurse. So that night we brought Skip along. He was Chuck's bosom buddy. We left him standing outside by the window and went in, donning the usual white gowns and washing well. After a brief chat, we broke the good news. "Skipper's here." Chuck's eye lit up and he turned his head toward the window strain-

Ike Supporters

(Continued from page one) said he will shake up the nation's military high command if elected president and will do everything possible "to utilize the knowledge and experience" of Gen. Douglas MacArthur. 2. Gov. Earl Warren of California, in a Boston speech, criticized "some in our party who would like to turn the clock back." Warren, an avowed candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, said that social security, social progress, civil liberties and collective bargaining are not "odious words" but are "the essence of Republicanism" because they represent America's way of avoiding collectivism. 3. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Jr., said he has deferred a decision on whether he should seek the Republican senatorial nomination in Michigan for the seat of his late father. 4. Lt. Gen. Albert Wedemeyer, retired wartime Army commander in China, said he would "talk over" proposals that he be a "favorite son" candidate in the Republican presidential primary in Nebraska.

About a week later the nurse announced she was going away on a boat trip and was replaced with the kindest, jolliest, and plumpest nurse we'd ever seen. Chuck promptly nicknamed her "Behoe," and she stayed faithfully with him until the day he left the hospital. Copyright 1952 by Charles A. Andrews. Distributed by United Features Syndicate, Inc. From Childhood

(Continued from page one) a "wonderful young couple." They went back to Canada and sailed home, arriving November 17. On Armistice Day the king had gone outdoors for the first time since his operation. There was a national thanksgiving for his recovery December 6. The entire loving, close-knit royal family spent Christmas together at Sandringham, the royal country estate in Norfolk. The king made his customary Christmas speech to his peoples of the British Commonwealth. But the speech was recorded. Britons were shocked at the change in his voice. It was husky and strained. There were reports that the king's doctors had advised him to abdicate in his daughter's favor. But at Sandringham the king seemed in excellent health. As her father's substitute, Princess Elizabeth took off with Philip for East Africa last Thursday, on the way to a royal tour of Australia and New Zealand. The king went to London to see them off. He looked drawn, exhausted, aged far beyond his years. Elizabeth and Philip arrived in Kenya, the king went back to Sandringham. TRAGIC NEWS COMES Last Tuesday night Elizabeth and Philip watched big game at a waterhole from a jungle treetop-bungalow. Elizabeth in brown slacks and a yellow bush shirt. At 8 a. m. Wednesday they went to their hunting lodge. At Sandringham, King George's valet went to his bedroom at 7:30 a. m. to take him his morning cup of tea. It was 10:30 a. m. in Kenya. The king had died in his sleep. At the moment of his death Elizabeth had become queen. It took six hours to get the news to Elizabeth. Philip told her. She burst into tears and broke down. But a member of her staff said: "She took it like a queen." The couple started back for London, by car and plane. They arrived at London airport Thursday. Elizabeth's children, Prince Charles and Princess Anne, were

Lillington VFW

(Continued from page 1) members pointed out that at the National V. F. W. Convention already scheduled this summer for Los Angeles the line of march for the parade will be determined by the membership records turned in by various posts. In that case, colors of the Lillington post would lead the colorful national parade. "That remains to be seen," said Sexton who emphasized that the Lillington V. F. W. is proud of its many new members but would welcome still other service members to the membership rolls. Chief V. F. W. project this past year has been the construction of the new V. F. W. home located on the east side of highway 15-A between the Cape Fear river bridge and the entrance to the town limits of Lillington. The handsome brick structure, which features a tin-paneled assembly room with trepace and hardwood floor is nearly completed. Practically the entire building, including much of the brick and mortar work as well as the interior, represents the handwork of members. For example, Sergeant Smith has worked there almost daily for a year. Next Tuesday on February 19, members will invite wives and sweet hearts to view the new building. In addition to Sexton, post officers include Stacy Stalling, senior vice-commander; Sgt. James B. Smith, junior vice-commander; H. D. Carson, Jr., quartermaster, and Dewey Newton, the adjutant.
