Carlyle
 Fear River is the only major river in the United States that has not begun to receive adequate attention from Congress.
 Congressman Carlyle said he regarded this not only as "an idle campaign statement, but as a reflection on the splendid records made by the Congressmen who preceded me in office."
 He said that the late Congressman Hannibal L. Godwin of Dunn and Former Congressman Homer L. Lyon of Wilmington and J. Bayard Clark of Fayetteville had all devoted much attention to development of the Cape Fear.
 "Of course the Cape Fear is not fully developed," added Mr. Carlyle. "I doubt that any other river in the United States is, but we are making progress and I shall continue my fight for still further development of the Cape Fear."
 Congressman Carlyle also pointed out that the State is spending $5 million on development of the port at Wilmington.
 Representative Carlyle called on a number of citizens during his quick trip to Dunn and Harnett and said he expected to see the others shortly.
 He said he saw no necessity of a formal statement announcing his candidacy. He filed for re-election on Saturday.
 "The people of my district," he said, "know me and what I stand for; they also are familiar with my record. It is on that record that I am asking the people to continue to allow me to serve them."
