Ives Says Ike

"I think he will be nominated if he doesn't come home," Ives said.

He added that an immediate return would subject Eisenhower to criticism that he quit his post as European defense commander before the job was done.

Other political developments: 1. Supporters of both Eisenhower and Harold E. Stassen were expected to enter their names in the Pennsylvania GOP presidential preference primary before today's 5 p. m. deadline.

2. Taft predicted that the issue of corruption in the Truman administration will "underlie the whole election." In a radio interview yesterday, the Ohio senator said he doesn't "put any stock" in public opinion polls indicating that many voters are "apathetic" toward skulduggery in the government. He said his campaign tours across the country have convinced him that "the people have been aroused" and that they realize the scandals reach "right up to the doors of the White House."

3. Taft's campaign headquarters announced that "prominent doctors in every part of the United States" have formed a committee to support Taft for president.

Pretty Model Negro Masons

ARREST ON TIP

An anonymous tipster who said she wanted to repay the city for opening a new hospital for narcotics addicts informed the squad last night that the ring operated from a Times Square telephone booth.

When the tipster disclosed that a "pretty blonde" was involved in the ring, Spinoza and Valente called in Laurette McDonnell, "mystery women" of the narcotics squad who has been the nemesis of drug peddlers for several years. Miss McDonnell, whose attractive face is never photographed because of her undercover work, joined Spinoza and Valente in a vigil near the telephone booth.

Another pretty operative was called to pose as a model and addict and when Schonbaum and Miss Lana appeared at the booth she purchased a quantity of heroin from them.

FOUND NEEDLES IN BRA - Then the detectives followed Schonbaum and the dancer to the subway station. Miss McDonnell took the woman into custody as the two detectives wrestled with Schonbaum.

Miss McDonnell searched the dancer and said she found three hypodermic needles in her brassiere.

They returned to the telephone booth where Miss Lana removed a key to a subway locker. In the locker the detectives found a hypodermic needle and a one pound can of heroin worth about $65,000.

(Continued from page one) many towns have done this. A petition will be presented for Alfred Blalock and George Pope asking that parking on only one side of the street be allowed on North Magnolia Avenue between Broad and Edgerton Streets.

Mr. Manning will present a report on the number of signs illegally erected in the parking strips of the town. A sign cannot legally be placed between the sidewalk and the street, without special authorization from the board.
