(Continued from page one) hat, and I watch the train pull out, and it's a funny feeling. It'd been a drinker, I'd got drunk as an outlet. But no, I had to run away on a train, and now the train is runnin' away from me. And there's no escape, because a man has got to face everythin', includin' hisself." Durante hired an automobile to take him back to Los Angeles. He arrived home during the early morning before dawn. Jeanne awakened, and when Durante embraced her she said, "Gee, Tootis, I'm so glad you got home before daybreak!"

TOLD HE WAS SLIPPING

Soon after New Year's of 1943 Clayton had a heart-to-heart talk with Jim. "Let's face it. You are slipping in the public mind. Soon it will mean curtains. You could easily see to it that Jeanne is taken care of my nurses while you go out and make some money. Jim, the Copacabana wants you, and New York wants you. You simply must do a couple of weeks in the East."

When Clayton informed the Schnozzola of two weeks of radio and night club bookings in New York for a total of $11,000, Durante seemed indifferent. He explained that Jeanne objected to his leaving her; that she was unable to travel East with him.

Later that day Jeanne asked, "Tooties, are you worrying a lot over that offer?" "Well," said Jim, "I could pay some bills. But let's forget it."

"If you leave me this time, Jim, you will never see me alive again." Durante looked at her in a shocked way. "Don't say that, Jeanne. Please don't say that! Because I'm not goin'."

"Take what?" "The two weeks in New York. I want you to go." Clayton saw Durante off on the train. "After the first show, Jimmy, call me and let me know how it goes. If you bog down, I will fly East, put on my old shoes again, and go out on the floor and dance. I've wired Jackson in Akron to join up with you and Roth in New York."

Durante registered at the Hotel Astor three days before the opening date at the Copacabana. His first radio show as a guest for the Camel Cigarette sponsor was well received.

After the broadcast Jimmy called Jeanne. She said, "I liked the program, Jimmy. It was very good." "Are you all right?" "Yes, Mother is here with me."

Overbys Land Big Catch In Florida

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Overby of Angier heartily recommended the Lake Griffin section, nine miles north of Leesburg, Florida, for any anglers who want to "wet a line" with the expectation of bringing home a good catch.

Both are ardent disciples of Isaac Walton, and on a recent morning they went fishing in this lake and came back with a string of speckled perch larger than they had ever caught before anywhere.

The couple are enjoying their vacation in the resort state and sent their regards to their many friends in the Angier area.
