to have set another kind of record. She divorced her 12th husband last Saturday.
 Steele was married the first time in 1911.

"I was a boxer traveling with a show, and I met a girl named Mary," he said. "Yes, Mary was the first. I moved on and she got a divorce."

WOODED AND WON
 "After that I wooed and won other girls, but I had to keep wooing, so the marriages didn't last. I believe Ruth—she was a platinum blonde—was next. Then there were Catherine and Rose and Peggy—she was the chorus girl—and Goldie and Annie and Rose and Nellie and Fannie and Frances. Frances, red-haired, was killed in an automobile accident at Salt Flat, Tex., last summer, Steele said.

"There must be a few more but their names slip my mind just now," he said.

OTHER CASES
 Other cases tried included: Robert McNeill, careless and reckless driving, $25 and costs. Sherman Ragland, abandonment and non-support, 90 days, suspended on payment of costs on condition the defendant pay $7 weekly now," he said.

He acknowledged that he hasn't done as well at keeping his wives at it as he would like. "They get jealous of me and then get a divorce," he said. "But can I help it if I appeal to other women?"

He said the trick in getting wives is to find a woman's weakness, then cultivate it.

"Some women like travel, so I suggest travel. Other like art and music, so I talk culture in a big way. Find their weakness and play up to it—that's the way to be a good Romeo," Steele said.

School Executive Is Club Speaker

Harnett County's Director of Education, Beaman Kelly, pointed out some of the needs and some of the weaknesses of our educational system, in an address before the Erwin Lions Club last night.
 "Children come up with some interesting things in school," Kelly said. In illustration he related a number of incidents where adult reasoning had puzzled children. Children, he said, often get an entirely different impression from that intended, and teachers have a tendency to just pass over these errors.

Three things, Kelly said, loom large in the way of needs, in his opinion. First of these is housing. He pointed out that statistics show that the high school population will increase by 50 percent by 1960.

"We have built to take care of present needs," he declared, "and the increase will present a tremendous problem." He pointed out that in some sections of the country, children are now being taught in gyms, auditoriums and hallways. Segregation will present a problem of increasing gravity, Kelly said, and admitted that he did not know the answer. "I know," he declared, "that facilities in many places are not equal, but equal facilities will have to be furnished. We must face this fact. The Supreme Court has said that we cannot have unequal facilities."

The teacher shortage, Kelly said, is a complex problem. Our institutions are turning out an over-abundance of high school teachers but not enough for the elementary schools. Teachers in elementary schools, he pointed out, are trained to teach a variety of subjects, while high school teachers specialize in one or two subjects. If teachers trained for high school work teach below the sixth grade they are penalized for teaching out of their field, he said. They take a cut in salary and lower certification.

GUIDANCE DESIRABLE
 Guidance, he declared, is another highly desirable innovation. The idea is completely new, he declared, by all good teachers have been following the plan for years. "It is one thing to fail, and quite another to be a failure," he declared. "Last year 973 pupils in this county had this slip in the face."

He reasoned that it was a better idea to let the pupil know before the last day of school that he was in danger of failing and if possible, arrange for guidance. "If the pupil drops out," he declared, "the school has lost any opportunity that it may have had to do something for him."

"We need teachers who can adapt the work to the pupils," he concluded. "If we give them work over their heads they will fail and if the work is below their mentalty they will become bored. We should not try to teach en masse but as individuals."

He counseled the formation of educational committees among civic groups to work with the teachers, principals and school authorities on the problems. "They are your children," he declared, "and they deserve the best that you can offer them."

President D. C. Woodall presided and the guest speaker was introduced by Lion D. T. Stuts, Principal of the Erwin Schools.
