Truman

States and its allies must not let up in their mutual defense efforts now because they are coming within sight of their goal of insuring "peace through collective strength."

He said the 50-division Atlantic Pact defense force agreed upon at the recent Lisbon conference "will bring within measurable distance the time when even the most foolhardy man in the Kremlin will not dare risk open attack" on Western Europe.

To equip the "formidable forces" which the European countries have pledged to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's command, he said, U. S. arm deliveries will be "greatly speeded up" in the next few months. Mr. Truman noted that his foreign aid program would bring his total national security spending budget to about $64,000,000,000, and said that raises "the serious question" of "whether the American nation can afford so much money."

SAYS WE CAN AFFORD IT

He answered with an unqualified "yes." National output, he said, is climbing so rapidly that even with the "immense diversion" of money and resources to defense, civilian should be at least 50 per cent better off by the beginning of 1953 than they were during World War II. "The burden has been carried with remarkably little strain," he said. "Our present security expenditures are clearly within our economic capacity."

Mr. Truman said he would not ask Congress "to spend one dollar more than is necessary to support our policy of peace."

"But there is no economy more false than that which is summed up in the tragic phrase, 'to little and too late.' It would be foolish and dangerous to withhold a dollar now at the risk of expending, not just many times as many dollars, but human lives as well, a few years later."

He conceded "shortcomings" in the defense efforts of some European allies, but said the United States has also fallen short of its own promises in production and delivery of arms.

Flown Home

Bad news for fear the shock would be harmful. And, too, it's the sort of news nobody likes to break to a child.

"We still don't know just how we are going to tell her," her brother-in-law, Lieutenant Murray Perskey, who will accompany her on the trip said. "She adored her parents and when she learns of their death it will be a terrible blow." The trip home will take only about three hours by plane. An ambulance will meet the plane at the New York airport and whisk the little girl to the Crippled Children's Hospital.

STILL IN PAIN

Her injured leg gives her considerable pain and coupled with the excitement of the trip, of which she had been informed two days ago, she had been extremely upset and nervous. During the past few days she had cried a lot and was wan and pale this morning as she was loaded on the ambulance for the first stage of her trip.

With her went boxes containing hundreds of cards of sympathy, toys and other items sent to her at the hospital by sympathetic persons in the community, mainly children who had heard of her plight through the newspapers and radio.

All of the cards had been carefully screened, of course, and any which contained any reference to the death of her parents had been withheld. She leaves behind many well-wishers, in Dunn, who have made the plight of this tragically orphaned child one of their chief concerns.

Fifth Plate Meetings Will Begin On Friday

Starting with a meeting Friday at the Coats School with Owen Odum, veteran's teacher as speaker, a series of "Fifth Plate" meetings throughout the county has been scheduled. The purpose of the meetings is to emphasize the need for increased farm production.

The "Fifth Plate" slogan is based on the estimated increase of the population of the county by 1975, at which time it is predicted that the population will have increased by about 25 percent. It is estimated that the average family will then number five persons, accounting for the fifth plate.

County Agent C. R. Ammons addressed the Bunlevel Ruritan Club on this subject this week and W. F. Boykin, soil conservation expert spoke to the Coats Junior Order. The program is being sponsored jointly by the County Agricultural Mobilization Committee and the Production and Marketing Administration. A special county committee has been set up by John H. Blackmon, agricultural teacher at Lillington.

McBryde Cameron heads the County Mobilization Committee and Kyle Harrington is director of the PMA.

Released on Bail

BRUNETTE Peggy Ellsworth, 24, "Miss Michigan of 1947," covers up as she leaves Federal Court in New York where she was arraigned on a charge of cashing stolen government checks in Detroit in 1950 to obtain heroin. She was released in $500 bail for a hearing on March 18. The dancer was arrested twice before in Detroit during narcotics investigations but did not serve time in prison. (International)

Officers found the woman wandering about the streets of Dunn in the early hours of yesterday morning. They questioned her and when she refused to give an account of herself or her reason for being on the streets at that hour brought her to headquarters. Even at headquarters, the woman refused to answer any questions about herself. She is willing to talk about any subject but when the conversation becomes personal she freezes up and stops talking, usually turning her back on the visitor and ending any chat she may have been engaged in when the personal issue came up.

The woman, about 40 years old, is clad in blue jeans. Her hair is dark with considerable gray. Her accent is noticeably southern although not from this particular section of the south.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Marjorie Ritchie of the Welfare Department came to Dunn to question her but even so admit a questioner as Mrs. Ritchie, accustomed to getting information for her department, was unable to do much better than the police.

Soviet Agent Linked With Stolen Secrets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army disclosed today that a person "believed to be a Soviet agent" stole and photographed the secret diary of an American major general who at the time was a military attaché in Moscow. Photographed excerpts, the Army said, were then used for Communist propaganda purposes to "prove" that the United States is plotting war upon Russia.

The diary was the property of Maj. Gen. Robert W. Grow, U. S. military attaché in Moscow from July 1, 1950, to last Jan. 20. Grow was recalled because of the diary incident.

SOME EXCERPTS

Published excerpts from the diary included: "War! As soon as possible! Now!" "It seems to me the time is ripe for a blow this year (1951)." "We must start by hitting below the belt. This war cannot be conducted according to Marquis of Queensbury rules."

According to the Army, the diary was stolen from Grow's hotel room when he was visiting Frankfurt, Germany, last summer.

"An individual believed to be a Soviet agent apparently entered Gen. Grow's quarters and obtained access to his personal diary," an Army spokesman said.

PARTS PHOTOGRAPHED

"Parts of the diary were photographed and the diary itself was returned before it was missed. The photostats were delivered to a British writer, Richard Squires, in East Berlin."

Squires used extracts from the diary, the spokesman said, "to prove" that Gen. Grow and the U. S. Army are "tools of wall Street and 'war mongers,' and that Gen. Grow was a spy."

Woman Held By Cops Refuses To Tell Name

Who is Jane Doe? That is a question that is posing a problem to the Dunn Police Department. All of their efforts to find out the identity of the strange woman held in the City Jail have been in vain.

Officers found the woman wandering about the streets of Dunn in the early hours of yesterday morning. They questioned her and when she refused to give an account of herself or her reason for being on the streets at that hour brought her to headquarters.

Even at headquarters, the woman refused to answer any questions about herself. In the meantime, the unknown woman is being held in the City Jail on a technical charge of vagrancy.
