Mrs. Nell Williams attended the oyster roast at Payetteville, on Wednesday night. This is one of the regular social meetings of the Bule's Creek Chapter of the Eastern Star.

Mr. Cecil Fuquay of Carolina Beach was a visitor in Coats over the weekend.

The annual Father-Son Banquet was held at the Coats Cafe, on Monday evening at the Coats Cafe. The delicious dinner was served by Mr. Ted Malone, owner of the cafe. After the business session an inspirational talk was made on the subject "The Value of Manual Arts and School." Miss Westbrook had a very fine exhibit of some of the work her seventh and eighth grade pupils have done. This work is one of the great needs of the elementary grades. There are many boys and girls that can't succeed in manual arts that cannot do as well as some of their fellow pupils in a formal education. This is equally as important in life as the white collar jobs. Our schools should be equipped for this kind of work all through the grades. Most pupils who drop out of school at an early age would remain in the classroom if there were courses in which they could succeed. Miss Westbrook is doing some very fine work along this line.

There has been a large number of absences during the last week of school on account of colds and flu. We hope that it will not reach an epidemic stage however.

Miss Eva Bateman was absent from her classroom a few days during the week on account of flu.

Mrs. Earl Vain's pupils were happy to have her back in school after being ill at home for a week.
