BALTIMORE (P) — L. Dale Thrash of Asheville, who has been indicted several times since he announced for Congress, is resigning his post as Tenth District highway commissioner. Gov. Kerr Scott said today.

Twelve Cases Are Tried Here

Twelve cases, the majority involving motor vehicle violations were tried before Judge H. Paul Strickland in City Court Monday. The docket was prosecuted by Solicitor J. Shephard Bryan. Henderson Wright, for whom a capias had been issued last May in a drunkenness arrest, was given 30 days on the roads, from where he had just returned. Granville H. Barefoot and Alex G. Bryan, were each taxed costs with prayer for judgment continued on speeding charges. Gareth Hilton Stephenson was taxed costs with prayer for judgment continued 6 months for allowing a minor to operate an automobile. Charges of assault against Johnny Council were not pressed. Henry Smith drew a sentence of 60 days, suspended on payment of $35 and costs on careless and reckless driving charges. Prayer for judgment was continued on payment of costs in the case of Alfred D. Honeycutt, charged with driving without lights. William W. Granger, charged with drunken driving, pleaded guilty to careless and reckless driving, which plea was accepted by the court. He drew 60 days, suspended 12 months, on payment of $35 and costs. The remaining cases involved public drunkenness and the offenders escaped with suspended sentences and fines.

You Just

body to arrange a party for you? Do you need somebody to defrost your refrigerator and take in the papers while you're way on vacation?

Do you want somebody to phone you at 4 a. m. and remind you that it's time for you to take your medicine?

ANYTHING UNDER THE SUN

In fact, you name it—and the M. and J. Service Company of Dunn will do it. There's absolutely no service under the sun—as long as it's legal, legitimate, respectable and honorable—that the M. and J. Service Company couldn't perform for you.

For a small fee of course! The M. and J. Service Co. is Dunn's newest and most unique business enterprise, opened this morning on the third floor of the First Citizens Bank Building by Jim McMillen, local radio commentator and organizer of scores of other organizations.

He organized the M. and J. Co. because of a famous New York concern, for several reasons. First of all, he's a man who lives alone and, with a busy schedule, recognizes the need for such a service bureau.

Second, he has a great host of friends here, likes Dunn, and wants to make this his permanent home. With a young daughter in school who'll be waiting to go to college in a few years, Mr. McMillen frankly admits that he needs to supplement his income at the local radio station.

"But most of all," Jim confesses, "I just enjoy being of service to people." The M. J. Service Co. (the M is for Mildred, his daughter, and the J is for Jim) is sharing a suite with J. O. West on the third floor of the First Citizens Bank Building. JUST CALL 4303

Mr. West doesn't know it yet, but he's going to get mighty tired of hearing that phone in the adjoining office ring every thirty seconds or so. The phone number, incidentally, is 4303.

Mr. McMillen explained today that he's starting off on a small and practical scale. But, later on he expects to add an employment service, and has other big plans which he isn't ready to disclose.

At present, the following services are offered: telephone secretarial bureau; baby sitting bureau; time-of-day-or-night service; shopping service; speakers' bureau; program bureau, etc. etc. And that etc. etc., etc still means anything you can name.

MEMBERSHIP BASIS The service is being offered on a monthly membership basis. It only costs a dollar a month to belong and you can get service just as many times a day, week or month as you like. There won't be any extra charges except actual cost.

For example, the M. and J. would get you a baby-sitter every night if you desire, and the only cost to you would be the normal fee to the baby-sitter.

If you want shopping done, you'd merely have to pay the cost of items purchased. And if you want the purchases mailed, of course, you'd be charged the actual amount of postage.

Before establishing this unique service bureau, Mr. McMillen talked with numerous civic leaders and groups of private citizens and all of them were enthusiastic over the idea. The office staff isn't yet complete and for a few days the office will be operated on a short schedule. But by the end of the week, M. and J. Service Company will be at your beck and call.

You name it—they'll do it or get it done for you! Of every 100 eggs placed in incubators, about two dozen fail to hatch. This represents an annual loss throughout the U. S. of $26,000,000.

Mr. Nisbet Reports Ike's Forces On Dunn's Debate

By LYNN NISBET
Record Correspondent

The current campaign for Governor was given a shot in the arm Thursday night at Dunn. Occasion was joint appearance of William B. Umstead and Hubert E. Olive on a program of the Eastern North Carolina Information Clinic at a dinner meeting in the Dunn high school gymnasium in 20-minute "formal" speeches the candidates restated previous platform declarations, showing the much publicized similarity in tenets.

The informal question-and-answer period produced clarification of the different approaches the candidates take to achieve these similar objectives. Major difference came on the issue of a bonus for war veterans, with less—but noticeable—distinction in attitude toward a liquor referendum, the farm program and public schools.

to the best of his ability all the people of the state.

APPLAUSE — Spontaneous applause by the audience greeted Umstead's answer about the beer lobbyists. Umstead's review of his activity in behalf of the rural and farm program also drew enthusiastic applause. It was quite evident that majority of the audience did not like the attempts to slant questions so as to evoke desired answers, instead of seeking honest expression of the candidates' opinions.

MUD — Despite this slight resentment at slanted questions and going back to 1933 for specific instances, there was no suggestion of mudslinging. Admitting that changed conditions might well cause changed opinions within the space of two decades, it is still true that publication of the record is not mud-slinging. Both Olive and Umstead made it clear that they are not ashamed of the records they made then or since. It is up to the candidates to convince the people that they stand on the records, or that they have honestly changed their minds. Olive admits he has reversed position on the beer question. Umstead has not confessed change in general attitude toward any of the issues with which he has dealt more continuously and consistently for 20 years.

CLINIC — The idea back of the Information Clinic is not unique, but the Dunn institution has some individual features. It was pointed out by all the speakers that events like that of Thursday night are typical of Democratic America, and impossible in many other countries. The appearance of rival candidates for the same office on the same forum undoubtedly has some disadvantages for the candidates with special appeals to make, but any disadvantage is more than offset by the opportunity afforded the voters to appraise the candidates.

HUMOR — There were some humorous incidents. Like Bill Umstead and Hubert Olive, devout churchmen seeking election to the chief executive office in the state with responsibility for enforcing all the laws, engaged in gambling by tossing a coin for speaking position—under supervision of Dougald McBae, chairman of the county board of elections. Incidentally, Umstead won the toss and chose to speak last. And, Umstead and Olive being seated at the long head table about 30 feet apart and very seriously marching to meet each other and shake hands for the camera before the bout began. And a couple of very attractive young ladies sitting near the door selling the gold-plated Jackass emblems of the Democratic party—but no elephants for the possible Republican quest. Then there was the very serious element, which requires a sense of humor to appreciate, of opposing candidates and their supporters slugging at each other but not losing their tempers. And 300 members of the audience listening attentively without having their preconceived opinions changed.

DIVERGENT — There was wide divergence on the item of sold-out note of Olive said he understood that several veterans' organizations favored a popular vote on the question, and he believed that whenever a substantial number of citizens asked for a referendum they should have it. Umstead said he believed the Governor and the General Assembly have a primary responsibility in deciding whether a bond issue should be submitted to a vote of the people. He had been advised that the proposed bonus would require $200 million and that needs of the public schools, and public health and other services are so much more important he could not in good conscience at this time recommend submitting a bonus issue to the people.

BEER — Question obviously intended to embarrass the candidates about their attitude toward beer sort of backfired. Olive was asked to reconcile his vote for legalized beer in 1933 with his present advocacy of a statewide referendum on alcoholic beverages. He reviewed conditions prevailing 19 years ago, with repeal of the 18th amendment imminent, and said he hoped then that providing light wine and weak beer might stem the tide toward large use of liquor. He ruefully quipped, "It don't look like it worked." Umstead was asked how he could accept support of beer lobbyists in view of his advocacy of a referendum. The question had a barb in the suggestion that he might have promised the beer people he would not press for a referendum. He replied that as a candidate for governor he sought the support of all voters, that he did not know who the beer lobbyists are, and declared he had made no promises of jobs or service to anybody except his general promise to serve

Co-hostesses Have Meeting Of Circle

Circle No. III of the Divine St. Methodist Church met at the home of Mrs. Cora Parker Monday afternoon at three-thirty with Mrs. Fred Baggett acting as co-hostess. The home of the hostess was most attractively arranged with spring flowers being used in lovely bouquets. Mrs. Lester Langston gave a very inspiring devotional and Mrs. Joyce V. Early led the group in prayer. A short business session was held. Due to the illness of Mrs. J. L. Ward, circle leader, Mrs. P. A. Lee presided over the session with routine business being taken care of. A social hour was held after the meeting with delicious refreshments of fruit punch, cake and salted nuts being served to the fifteen members present.

ONE-WAY STREET

In response to the request of a number of citizens, Railroad Avenue has been designated as a one way street from Broad to Edgerton street and signs indicating this will be placed at once.

This will avoid a rather serious congestion resulting from cars entering Railroad Avenue from Edgerton Street not having sufficient room to pass.

Engineer Paul M. VanCamp was unable to appear to discuss the survey on the drainage problem on South Clinton Avenue. Drainage would be simple. City Manager Manning pointed out, if the Coast Line could be persuaded to lower its culverts.

All of the city officials who can arrange to do so will attend the District Meeting at Chapel Hill this afternoon. The meeting will be at 3 o'clock and dinner will follow at 6 o'clock. The meeting is sponsored by the League of Municipalities.

A group of petitioners from the section of Broad Street at the west end of Dunn were told to get in touch with the Highway Department with regard to drainage plans. The board assured them that any drainage measures which received Highway Department sanction would be ok'd by the town board.

Clearing of the deed for the new health center awaits the completion of the period of advertisement required by law, but the other problems in connection with the building have been solved, it was reported by Mayor Ralph Hanna.

He told the board that water and sewage lines were available when the exact location of the building was determined, and that power lines were directly across the street from the location. The Carolina Power and Light Company, he said, has assured electrical connections at any time.

City Manager Manning was instructed to communicate with the Medical Care Commission and report these facts to them.

DELAY TANK ACTION The board made no decision in regard to the purchase of the water tank from Gastonia. The tank will be sold at public auction in the near future and W. J. Barlow had told the City Manager that it would probably sell for about $12,000.

It would have to be disassembled there and each part marked and brought to Dunn and set up again. This would cost $18,000, making the total about $30,000. However, it would cost about $100,000 or more to build a similar tank at present prices.

The tank was built in 1934 and is in excellent condition. It would be higher than the present tank other gifts," he added.

After John Wade presented the parsonage keys to Pastor Smith, he responded with congratulations to the church for erecting such a house, and pledged his best in serving the Spring Branch community. After a solo, "Bless This House", sung by Gladys Strickland, the pastor led the dedicatory prayer.

Building

The second Harvest Day offering brought the total amount to about $4,500.00. Church members and others gave trees that furnished the lumber, and when the actual building was begun in January, began giving of their time. It was estimated that 1500-man-hours were donated in labor. Cash cost of the parsonage was $6,333.05 of which amount $1,000 was borrowed to be repaid in October when Spring Branch will have its third Harvest Day.

Building committee was headed by Wayne Lee, assisted by Sam Strickland and John Wade. "We are deeply grateful for the wonderful cooperation we had in building our parsonage," volunteered Sam Strickland in reading the report of the committee. "And to Mrs. A. E. Alderman we owe special thanks for donating an acre of land for the parsonage, in addition to her Chamber of Commerce, Mayor Ralph E. Hanna and other leaders here. Since coming to Dunn at the close of World War II, Mr. Wullenwaber has taken an active part in particularly all of the various civic, social and religious affairs. He is a director of the Chamber of Commerce and a former president of the Dunn Rotary Club.

here and although it would hold only 300,000 gallons, less than the present tank's 500,000 gallons, its added height would make it more efficient.

Although admitting that the tank would be a bargain, and could certainly be used to advantage, the board took the position that the water situation was a long range program. Then too, in the matter of funds, there is no money available for such a purchase at the present time.

City Attorney I. R. Williams was instructed to look into the matter of overhauling the ordinance regulating taxicabs in the town. Questions directed to City Manager Manning from clergymen, business men and other interested citizens, have pointed up the fact that the town only grants a franchise to the company and exercises no regulations over the drivers.

A large number of these citizens, both white and colored, have suggested that the ordinance be amended to regulate this business in the same way that it is done in other communities. The City Attorney will study the problem and make recommendations at the next board meeting.

George Glover appeared and asked the board to lease him the land back of the old fair grounds to be used for pasturage for two calves. The City Attorney told the board that this land could not legally be leased.

However, the board decided to let Glover use the land for this purpose, subject to being taken back at any time without notice. "If he will keep it cleared off it will be worth it," pointed out Commissioner R. G. Tart.

WANTS HOLE FILLED Jim Yearby asked the board to allow trucks hauling trash to dump in a hole on land which he had recently sold to Ed. Purdie in order to partially fill the hole. When the hole is filled to within about two feet of the top, he plans to complete the fill with dirt. He must complete the filling within 60 days, he said.

The board decided to get together with Yearby and Purdie and if both were willing to try and go along with the project, it would save a longer haul with trash and help out a Dunn taxpayer.

The request for the widening of South Railroad Avenue from the water tank to the Gulf Oil Plant was tabled for more information. City Attorney Williams gave it his opinion that the street existed only on sufferance from the railroad, whose right-of-way extends each way 65 feet from the center of the southbound track. This would extend the right-of-way nearly to the building line.
