

Movie Queens Now Sport New Hair-Do

HOLLYWOOD — Movie queens are blossoming out today in an extra-short "tomboy" hair-do that puts the poodle haircut right out of style.

To be fashionably poodled, actresses like Esther Williams and Elizabeth Taylor had their hair cut short and curled like the noggins of those French poodles.

Now glamour girl Jan Sterling makes them look like long-haired ladies.

She had her shoulder-length blonde curls whacked shorter than Tony Curtis'.
Jan's hair, what's left of it, is straight and slicked back just like the boys outside the corner pool hall.

LOOKS LIKE CHOIR BOY

It's so short, in fact, that her husband, Paul Douglas, cracks, "The first morning I thought I'd waken up next to a choir boy."
"It all started with swimming," Jan explained. "Paul can get out of the pool and he looks fine but I always have to put my hair up in bobby pins."

"So the studio hairdresser cut off seven inches of my hair. Now when I get out of the pool it looks great. "Besides," she added, "Paul and I can go to the same barber now." Her Paramount Studio bosses raised an eyebrow but finally gave in. She had to leave her hair slightly long at the sides so she can pin on false hairpieces for their next period picture, "Pony Express."

Another devotee of the tomboy cut is actress Marian Marshall. Her's is slightly longer than Jan's, though, and combed in back like a zoot-suiters' coiffure.

"With the long length I looked like ever other blonde in movies," said Miss Sterling. "Now they know I'm the one with short hair."

MUST BE FEMININE

"I don't know whether just anybody could do this. You have to be feminine enough. Some girls, especially brunettes, might look just like boys. But I don't think it lessens most girls' sex appeal. If you've got it, you've got it, without hair or with."

The next step after the tomboy cut will have to be the crew cut. "I don't think I'll go that far," Jan said.

GENDARMES BREAK UP RED RIOT

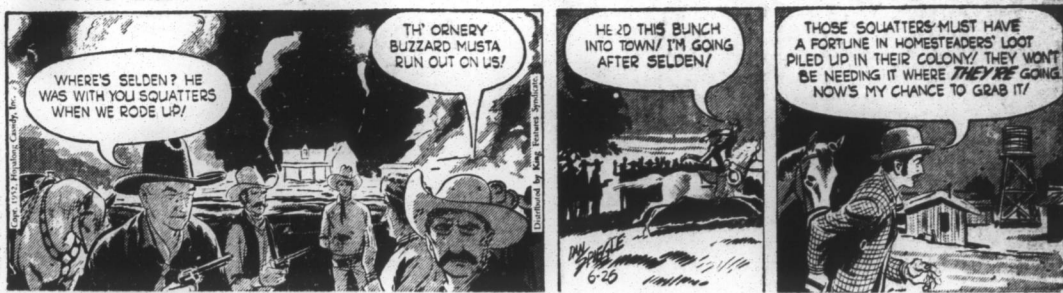

HOLDING THEIR GUNS READY, steel-helmeted gendarmes move in on Red demonstrators in Paris. The riots, touched off by the arrival of Gen. Matthew Ridgway, were a prelude to the seizure by police of Communist Party headquarters throughout France. Flying squads swooped into offices and ransacked files for evidence to support government charges that the Reds planned overthrow of state. (International)

URGES SPEED ON GERMAN PACTS

SWIFT RATIFICATION of the recently signed German defense contracts is urged by Secretary of State Dean Acheson (right) as he testifies before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in Washington. He declared them "a keystone in building strength and unity among free nations." At left is John J. McCloy, High Commissioner to Germany.
