King Cotton

Ins spite of high-money, fast selling crops like tobacco, Cotton is still king in this section and a good proportion of the economy is still dependent on whether the cotton crop is good or bad.

Synthetics may supplement cotton in wearing apparel but they will never replace it and it is, and probably will remain the basic fabric. New technological advances are constantly finding new uses for cotton and its by-products, which more than take up the gap made by the use of other materials.

In years of a heavy crop we often hear the cry to limit production on cotton and turn the land into other crops.

But one short crop year is enough to emphasize the need for this basic commodity, particularly in times of emergency such as the present.

The nation needs cotton for tents, bandages, clothing, gun cotton and hundreds of other military purposes. As long as the bogey of over production is kept well hidden and the present crying need for lint products prevails, there is no reason to cry havor for the cotton farmer.

SOCIALIST NEUTRALISM

SOCIALIST NEUTRALISM

It has been fashionable in recent years, in this country, for those in both parties who deal with international problems, to believe that a "Third Force" can save Europe from Russia. They have therefore tended to support the various Socialist groups which take a middle position between the United States and Soviet Russia. In effect, it is more becoming American policy, by indirection, to support neutralism in Europe.

in Europe.

The British Labour Party has, under the influence of Aneurin Bevan, been developing neutralistic tendencies. Although at a recent meeting of the party, the Bevan faction was defeated, its strength was apparent. It is probable that should the Labour Party return to power, Bevan will be its leader. He is a National Socialist of Marxist persuasion, who places the United States on a par with Soviet Russia from a British standpoint. He seeks, for Great Britain, a balance of power between the United States and Soviet Russia, with Great Britain allied to neither but benefiting from both.

If Stevenson loses in November, part of the fault will lie at the doorstep of his newly picked, nave Democratic National Chairman, Stephen Mitchell.

The other day, Bert Gross, crack research expert for the Democrats, turned in his resignation and walked out. Reason. A rule that every piece of research had to cross the chairman's desk before going to the White House or Springield.

First Drink a Revelation in Releving Tension, Woman No Longer Happy Without Liquor; How Break Habit?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a housewife in my late thirties, mother of two children—wholesome, healthy young animals. My husband also is wholesome and healthy, but not entirely happy—because I love to drink. I started imbibing at college. It was "the thing to do" on our campus. The first drink was a revelation. I had never before felt so completely pleased with the world and all its inhabitants.

I wanted very much to be popular with boys and eventually succonvinces me that Charnay was no such thing. As a newman he once knew and wrote stories about Costello. But they were critical stories. However, the rumor kept cropping up to such an extent that Charnay was cross-examined by the Kefauver Crime Committee, which could find nothing to substantiate the rumor.

Though probed by Kefauver, Charnay harbored no grudge, had an interesting experience at Chicago when Kefauver was running for president.

Charnay was adviser to Sen. Dick Russell of Georgia. And after both Russell and Kefauver were defeated by Stevenson and the top contractions and the top
