McGrath

Truman felt that a great mistake and a great harm had been done. McGrath said, "According to the story related to me, the President took his first, came down on the arm of his chair and said it just had to be corrected. "I was told Mr. Truman was going to make a very favorable statement about me... after the elections. "I never got a reply," Caudle added. Last June, he went on, Dawson told, "some Charlotte friends of mine" that "Lamar was right and he's right now."

SAYS CLIQUE AFTER HIM — "Perhaps the statement speaks for itself," Keating observed. Caudle said McGrath told him that the "same clique" which was responsible for Caudle's dismissal was after him—McGrath and finally got him, too. He said McGrath didn't name any names, but that his own "idea" is that the "clique" included Joseph Short, who died last week; presidential counsel Charles S. Murphy and David Stowe, administrative aide to the President. Caudle insisted, despite a White House denial, that he was told Mr. Truman now believes he made a mistake in firing him and that the President will "rectify it" after the elections. Rep. Claude I. Bakewell (R-Mo) asked if he meant the ones coming up in November. "Yes sir," Caudle replied. He added, however, that he is not "banking on it." Some time after his dismissal, Caudle recalled, a "lot of people" knew from Missouri who were disturbed by what had been done. "Conferred with Mr. Truman at Blair House. "They reported to me that Mr.

John Sparkman, Democratic vice-presidential candidate, said today he had "nothing to hide" on his expenses, but said he did not know the salary paid his wife, who is on his senatorial payroll. He told greeters that he had nothing to hide "as far as my expenses are concerned and I want everybody to know that my wife is on my payroll in Washington and has been since 1942, earning every dollar she got."

Fair In Sampson Is Big Success

Under the joint sponsorship of the Clinton Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post Number 7547, the Sampson County Agricultural and Livestock Fair has proven the most successful such event to be held in our neighboring county.

Fifty-two dairy cattle were entered in this category, 38 by white farmers and 14 by Negro entrants. Thirty-two of the entries were made by 4-H and FFA entrants and all major dairy breeds were entered.

Twenty of the entries in this class took blue ribbons with the award of $20 and 13 were given red ribbons which carried an $18 award. In the beef cattle class there were 7 entries, four of which were given blue, two red and one a white ribbon, carrying cash awards respectively of $20, $18 and $16. Four sheep were entered and all were of blue ribbon caliber.

Sixty-three swine were entered by Sampson County 4-H and FFA entrants. Of these 48 took blue ribbons with awards of $10; 11 were given red ribbons with awards of $8; and 4 white ribbons with $6 awards. Nearly two thousand dollars went for awards in livestock alone and an additional $17,000 was awarded for educational exhibits, poultry, field crops and home making projects, the latter entered by 4-H and Home Demonstration groups.

Entries in individual exhibits received awards as follows: of 153 canning exhibits, 35 received blue ribbons; of 23 baking, 15 received blues; of 30 clothing, six received blues; of nine crocheting and knitting, three received blues; and two rugs received blues.

In the poultry department there were 174 entries consisting of 114 New Hampshires of Sears 4-H Chain. Blue ribbon winners were Paul Vann, Lerou Lucas, Mrs. Ralph Lucas, A. C. Hathcock, and J. Lucas. Six of the entries were tur-

(Continued from page one) accounting of their finances as he did. Stevenson, the Democratic presidential nominee, refused today to reveal the names of Illinois state officials to whom he had given cash gifts to augment their income. But he stoutly defended his system. Sparkman also rejected the demand. Hood said "the people are talking and have talked" through the outpouring of telegrams from all over the country. He said he thinks Eisenhower "react" to that demonstration and to the dramatic presentation by the young Californian last night and retain Nixon as his running mate. Wesley Roberts, the GOP national committee's director of organization, told newsmen that analysis of the first telegrams to reach headquarters last night showed that about 4,000 were in favor of Nixon and 21 were against. Roberts called it a "magnificent demonstration" and emphasized that the response has poured from all sections of the country—from city and rural areas alike. Some 4000 telephone calls were handled before 2 a. m. Hood said that as far as he knows, Nixon's appeal for public response to his financial accounting had not been cleared with the national committee or with Eisenhower.

Umstead Favors Development Of Inland Waterways

RALEIGH (P)—William B. Umstead, Democratic gubernatorial nominee, has promised that his administration will encourage development of the state's inland waterways to attract industry, tourists, and shipping for the state's new deepwater ports. Umstead got squarely on the record at the second session of the Advisory Budget Commission here yesterday. J. A. Hackney of Washington, chairman of the newly-organized Coastal Marine Council, said the state should make a survey to determine which inland ports should be developed and to what extent.

Courage Of Four In One Family Are Killed By Polio

MILWAUKEE, (P)—Bulbar polio has killed four of Leo Linnemanstons' eight children in nine days.

Barbara, 13, the fourth victim, died last night. Funeral services were held the same day for her eight-year-old sister, Mary Ann, 4, died the next day. Paul, 16, died Sept. 15. Lorraine, 4, died the next day.

Hospital authorities said that it is the first time that four cases of bulbar polio have been recorded in one family. "God must have wanted them very much," Mrs. Linnemanstons said when her third child died. And now, Barbara is dead, too. Mrs. Linnemanstons stayed with Barbara yesterday while her husband attended Mary Ann's funeral.

OTHERS QUARANTINED — The other children are quarantined at home. They are John, 20, a Marine on emergency leave from his California post, Janet 18, Francis, 11 and Yvonne, 1. So far, none has had any sign of polio infection. The Linnemanstons prayed that they would be spared. They asked their friends and family to pray too. They said they were "almost afraid to wake up in the morning." A fund has been started to help the family.
