

Dr. Hunter Heard At Cleveland Meet

Dr. W. B. Hunter, Harnett County Health Officer, described the work of his diabetic clinic to the Food, Nutrition and Health Officers section of the American Public Health Society at Cleveland Friday afternoon.

The clinic started, Dr. Hunter explained, when it was found that some diabetics patients appearing at the County Health Department, were not receiving adequate care.

A few of these people were helped, with such gratifying results, that the number increased and soon he found that he was conducting a diabetic clinic.

Dr. Hunter contends that a clinic for diabetes conducted by the Health Department is justified for the same reasons that justify clinics for maternity, infancy, crippled children and cancer.

Dr. Hunter described how the clinic was given a boost by a mass survey for diabetes conducted along with an x-ray survey for diseases of the chest in which 6,000 were examined, 500 re-examined, and 48 cases of diabetes were found.

The survey was made possible, he said, by help given by Dr. L. C. Wilkerson and many others of the Public Health Service and by the support of the Harnett County Medical Society. The clinician, to make the tests, mounted on a trailer, was loaned by the Public Health Service.

Doctors became interested in the venture through a dinner meeting attended by 125 physicians, featuring Dr. Howard Root as the main speaker. Dr. Root has visited Dr. Hunter's clinic in Harnett. This not only aroused interest among doctors, but made the public diabetics conscious.

561 ADMITTED During the six years the clinic has been in operation, Dr. Hunter told the group, 561 patients have been admitted, well over one percent of the population of Harnett. These cases included diabetes, obesity and nondiabetic ailments.

Of the last hundred consecutive cases, 82 were referred to the clinic by doctors. Of the others, some were referred by other clinics and some were referred by their own physicians.

"This," Dr. Hunter declared, "is an indication of the support given this clinic by the local medical profession. Obviously," he declared, "this is a doctor's clinic. Without those referred to us by them we would not have enough cases to keep going."

Dr. Hunter told the group that about two percent of the population in this country has diabetes, one percent known cases and the other one percent not yet diagnosed.

The disease, he said, is universal in distribution, with some racial variations. It is more frequent in women than in men and much more frequent in fat people than in thin people. For this reason, he points out, the control of obesity will usually control diabetes.

Since the disease is hereditary, he pointed out, relatives of diabetics, persons overweight and people over forty should be particularly urged to take part in mass surveys.

"It has been said," Dr. Hunter declared, "that a diabetic is as old as his age, plus the age of his diabetics. They are more prone to vascular and kidney disorders than other people.

The management of diabetes, he told the group, is strictly preventive medicine as there is no cure for this condition. Doctors do not treat diabetes, they teach the patient how to manage his own individual case. The object of the treatment is to prevent complications and to keep the patient as near normal as possible.

Treatment of the condition is in a large measure a matter of diet, he told the group. The diabetic eats

(Continued From Page One) suspended 12 months on payment of $50 and costs, plus an additional $22.50 for the damage done to Thomas' car. He also recommended revocation for a year of Armstrong's license.

ANGERED AT SERVICE Luther Rodney Johnson, 26-year-old Dunn man, became angered when an attendant at H. P. Johnson's Oil Company did not wait on him quickly enough. According to the attendant, Paul V. Barefoot, 21, he pulled off his shirt, started "cussing" and declared that he was going to beat Barefoot up.

Barefoot, whom Johnson had charged with an affray, told the court that he used a flashlight to subdue the truculent customer and that the owner and other attendants finally managed to stop the fray.

Mr. Johnson identified the defendant as his nephew, and told the court that he had been forced to call the officers on another occasion due to trouble with young Johnson. "I'd like to have him put on a peace bond to keep away," he declared.

Judge Strickland ordered the warrant amended to charge assault instead of affray and gave Johnson 30 days, suspended 12 months on payment of $10 and costs. Young Barefoot was found not guilty.

Issuance of a capias for Joseph Kimson Stanley, 47, of Benson, was withheld pending receipt of a certificate or phone call from his physician. He had presented one to Solicitor J. Shephard Bryan, but this did not cover the proper date, and he returned to Benson for the proper paper.

DRUNKEN DRIVER FINED Raymond McLamb was found guilty of drunken driving and given 90 days, suspended 12 months on payment of $100 and costs with the same food as anyone else but the diet is regulated by trial and error and additions and subtractions made according to the trend of the patient's weight.

NUTRITION IS VITAL The clinic, Dr. Hunter explains, might well be called a nutrition clinic since it was found that obesity and diabetes went hand in hand. In a clinic for obesity, many of the patients will be diabetics, while in a diabetic clinic many of the patients will be obese. Nutrition forms the main treatment in both cases.

Treatment starts on the first visit, Dr. Hunter explained, and if insulin is needed the patient is taught how to take it and gives the first dose to himself while in the office.

In addition, the program includes individual and group instruction, often with the use of film strips. Individual instruction is given each patient regarding his own diet and the insulin dosage.

With all of the regular personnel taking an interest in the disease, the clinic for diabetes has taken a routine place along with the other clinics, Dr. Hunter said, and is now an integral part of the Harnett public health program.

"It is believed," Dr. Hunter concluded, "that in the field of diabetes and obesity, there is a field where for a comparatively small expenditure of money, preventive medicine can do much good for many people."

The clinic established in this county by Dr. Hunter, was the first of its kind in the nation, and he has been asked to explain its work on numerous occasions so that it might be used as a model for similar clinics in other sections.

The title role of "Don Pasquale" will be sung by a recent graduate of Michigan State College, basso James Martindale.

This will mark the first season Mr. Martindale has sung with Grass Roots Opera, headed by Attorney A. J. Fletcher of Raleigh, who also has an important role in tonight's production.

The story of "Don Pasquale" is an amusing one. The wealthy, aging Don Pasquale decides to marry and spend his fortune, instead of leaving it to his nephew, with whom he has quarreled. Don Pasquale seeks the aid of a doctor friend in finding a wife but the doctor, feeling the rigors of matrimony might prove too much for the old man, plots to cure him once and for all of such foolishness. He arranges with the young lady the nephew is in love with to impersonate the doctor's sister, a young, innocent girl just out of a convent. The young lady agrees to the plan, playing the devious beauty to perfection until a fake marriage ceremony is performed. Then the atmosphere of the household undergoes a drastic change. She raises the waxes of the servants, orders new horses and carriages, plans elaborate parties and insults the old man to the extent he is about to lose his mind. About this time an amusing development appears in the plot with the result that all ends happily.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Northcutt had as their weekend guests Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wright of Roanoke, Va.
