

McMillan-Dail Vows Spoken

The Bluff Presbyterian Church in Wade was the scene of a wedding November 2 when Miss Virginia Valentine Dail of Dade was married to Harold Davis McMillan, son of Mrs. John McMillan of Wade and the late Mr. McMillan. The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Dail.

The Rev. D. M. McGeary officiated at the double-ring afternoon ceremony. Presenting the program of wedding music were Mrs. James Maxwell, pianist, and Mrs. Robert McNeill, soloist.

The bride's sister, Miss Louretta Dail, was the maid of honor. Her gown was of fuschia nylon net featuring a fitted bodice and a full skirt topped with handkerchief points. Her cascade bouquet was of mauve gladioli and purple violets with streamers of ivy.

The bridesmaids were Miss Margaret McMillan, sister of the bridegroom of Clayton, Mrs. Herbert Thompson, sister of the bride, Miss Ann McKeel of Whiteville, and Miss Frances Taylor, cousin of the bride. They wore dresses like that of the honor attendant and they carried similar bouquets.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother Auspy Dail, wore a gown of candlelight satin and Chantilly lace. The fitted lace bodice featured a small lace collar and long fitted sleeves. A narrow ruffle of lace extended around the waist line to form a peplum effect and the full skirt extended into a cathedral train. Her fingertip veil of imported bridal illusion fell from a circlet of orange blossoms in her hair. She carried a white prayer book topped with a white purple-throated orchid and showered with white satin streamers.

Harry McMillan attended his brother as best man and the ushers were Curtis Dail, brother of the bride, Rudolph McMillan, nephew of the bridegroom, Joe Heath of Wade and Patrick Cusumano of Fort Bragg and St. Louis, Mo.

Little Miss Margaret Thomas Jilcott, niece of the bridegroom, was the flower girl. She wore a floor-length dress of dark green velvet and carried a basket of rose petals. Bill Dail, nephew of the bride, was the ring bearer. He wore a suit of navy blue and carried the rings on a white satin pillow.

Mrs. Dail wore an afternoon dress of grape crepe with matching accessories and a corsage of orchids. The mother of the bridegroom chose an afternoon dress of black crepe and velvet with matching accessories. She also wore an orchid corsage.

When the couple left for their wedding trip, Mrs. McMillan was wearing an orchid suit with black velvet accessories and the orchid from her prayer book.

The bride graduated from the Central high school and is now working in Fayetteville. Mr. McMillan attended the University of North Carolina and N. C. State College. The cleanest skin going

by Bernice Peck

It's bonny, a skin that look alive, brightly alive, under a gauze of make-up—even without make-up. It's old news now that much of what is pretty or unpretty about a complexion has its origin far below the surface, the skin acting as a frank reporter on internal order or strife. If everything's tidy with your basic apparatus, then don't let externals swipe your skin's freshness and clarity. Externals like dirt, dirt that doesn't always show but always damages. (If you had a dime for every skin that goes to bed cleansed—but only half-clean—your income tax would be astronomical.)

Dermatologists have said that probably half the lesser skin disorders they see are the results of optimistic, vague cleansing methods, the kind that remove some make-up and grime, leave behind just enough to clog those tiny exits, the pores. And these pores after a while of clogging, are, alas, no longer tiny. Then a skin's color and tone turn gloomy, it becomes more and more disposed to minor grievances, spotting, blackheads, even infections. Its owner begins to think of hers, pitifully, as a problem skin, although she herself manufactured the problem.

Actually your skin, any skin, can be flawlessly clean without an arm-long row of bottles and jars for doing daily business. It's not how many preparations you use, it's how consistently, how properly, you use three, two or even the one that does the job. As for the one, it soon might be something new called White Sable, something you'll be seeing and hearing about all over a few weeks from now. Its maker, Revlon, have had both versions of White Sable in and out of their testing laboratories for lo these three years. Object of each return trip—to make it even better, make it even do more, than the time before. Finally, they seem satisfied that each is wonderful for its particular purpose, and here, partially, is why:

It is a silky, milk-white balm that first cleanses, then softens, then protects perfectly any type of skin. Its combination of elements makes it gentler even than necessary for the dry, baby-thin skin, effectual enough for the oiliest. And it functions as perfectly for any skin on the in-between list; the normal, the easily disturbed, the undecided (that irritating combination of dry-and-oily areas.) Every possible factor has been considered, from skin personality and climatic conditions to the small but sweet pleasures of actual use. White Sable goes on with a silky luxury, with a delightful fragrance. It take a moment to do its job. You can wipe it off with tissue or wash it off with a cloth and cool water. What film remains is benign to any skin facing any temperature. That's one version of White Sable, its price, $1.50.* The other has all the same wonderful qualities plus an entirely new idea for a cleaning preparation (the addition of hormones to replenish the precious natural supply that birthdays can cost the skin.) This version, $2.25.* Either is an easy-going plastic-flasked traveler. Either is not only ready—but able—to make your skin clean as can be. And a completely, constantly clean skin is only a few steps away from a beautiful complexion.
