Oil Committee Does Not Agree

RALEIGH (P) — A special committee has reported to Gov. Kerr Scott that "discrimination" against North Carolina by big oil companies costs the state's motorists about $3,000,000 a year, but committee members differed sharply about a solution.

Four of the 11 members signed a minority report attacking the recommendations of the majority as "timid" and urged that the legislature put gasoline sales under jurisdiction of the Utilities Commission and strengthen anti-trust laws.

The majority opinion, however, said regulation of petroleum prices would not "be in the public interest." "It would lead inevitably in the future to attempted regulation of the prices of many other articles of commerce which this committee does not regard as desirable," the report said.

The committee pointed out that North Carolina has one of the highest gasoline taxes in the nation and the highest gasoline inspection fees with the exception of Tennessee. Virginia has no inspection fee.
