WAYNESBORO, Va. (AP) — Virginia clubwomen for the first time have chosen a Negro as their state's "Mother of the Year." Mrs. Leah Young of Courtland, Va., 66-year-old mother of 14 children, will represent Virginia in the national contest for the title, "American Mother of the Year for 1953."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. John L. McMillan, D-SC was to go on trial in federal district court today on a charge of entering an illegal oil lease with the interior department. McMillan is accused of leasing 1,500 acres of oil lands in Utah in 1951.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Edgar G. Brown of the National Negro Council has urged President Eisenhower to grant the Medal of Honor to a white lieutenant colonel and the Negro private who saved his life in Korea.

NEW YORK (AP) — New York's high-priced call girl racket gets another airing Tuesday when a former tennis star goes on trial on white slavery charges. John R. Baruch, 82-year-old financier, said the "surest deterrent against another war would be to so narrow the gap in our mobilization that no enemy could delude himself into thinking he could overwhelm us with a surprise blitz attack."

WOOKEY, England (AP) — The witch of Wookey is to be exorcised for the second time in 1,000 years. Wing Commander G. W. Hodgkinson and his wife feel the witch has haunted their house in Somerset long enough. Hodgkinson has arranged for a monk from nearby Glastonbury Abbey to hold exorcizing services in the house.

WAYNESBORO, Va. and Towns Committee on the major question of a statewide liquor referendum. Action on the liquor issue has been delayed for the past two weeks.

Among bills that may be introduced this week are those being readied to call for a statewide referendum on Umstead's proposed $87,000,000 bond issues for school construction, mental hospitals and permanent improvements.

Important committee hearings and decisions are also on the week's calendar.

The Senate agriculture committee has scheduled a public hearing tomorrow on a bill by Sen. Ralph Scott to establish a powerful nine-member State Milk Commission with authority to regulate prices and distribution of fluid milk and cream.

fined itself to a two-block area in the middle of town. The high winds lifted roofs from a theatre and two stores like a giant bottle opener.

Another tornado hit one mile south of Bessemer, Ala., destroyed a hangar and 12 private airplanes. Still another storm completely wrecked a Negro church seven miles west of Florence, Ala., but no injuries were reported.

Gomez's wife and another woman were injured by the same falling tree that hit the soldier's automobile and killed him. The seventh injury was reported at Beebe, Ark., where Mrs. Sally Hill was hurt as a tornado twisted her home from its foundations.

The Louisiana tornado marched through Winnfield and Columbia, La., after punching Leesville. Sheriff E. G. Erskine of Caldwell Parish said the storm dipped into the main business section of Columbia and did at least $500,000 worth of damage.

MISSED DEATH
"I don't see how a half a dozen people weren't killed," he said.

Erskine reported no injuries but said that two buildings were destroyed, several stores were wrecked and power lines downed. The town of 5,000 persons was left without electricity for a time.

Dyersburg, Tenn., was buffeted by high winds, possibly the fringe of the Newbern tornado, and police said an airport administration building and several homes were badly damaged.

Tornadoes were also reported in Jonesboro and Riverdale, Ark. A year ago last Saturday, violent tornadoes swept Arkansas, killing 30 persons in Judsonia.

Meanwhile, residents of Minnesota and Wisconsin cleaned up from Saturday's tornadoes that killed two persons in Minnesota and injured three in Wisconsin. Two horses were killed by a twister at Eau Claire, Wis.

Some light rain fell early today in the upper Mississippi Valley and Great Lakes region and in the Gulf States. A few scattered snow showers were reported in the Rocky Mountain area, but in most sections of the country the weather was springlike—or at least moderate.

Taft Declares

was in little doubt, the floor fight attracted wide attention as the first direct test of strength between Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, who has gone down the line for the appointment, and Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.), who is leading the opposition, along with Sen. Styles Bridges (R-N. H.) and Pat McCarran (D-Nev.).

CONCEDES DEFEAT
McCarthy conceded defeat in advance. He said the nomination will be approved "because all the Truman Democrats and many Republicans who are not yet ready to break with the administration" are supporting Bohlen.

Sen. Charles W. Tobey (R-N. H.), a veteran Foreign Relations Committee member, agreed approval was likely, but for different reasons. Tobey said McCarthy and his colleagues are "willful men motivated by bitter hatred of Harry Truman and Dean Acheson." In some respects Bohlen, a 49-year-old career diplomat who is regarded by the State Department as a leading expert on Soviet affairs, was the forgotten man in the fight.

The real controversy was between Dulles and senators who claimed that he "overrode" R. W. Scott McLeod, State Department security chief, when he cleared Bohlen from a standpoint of loyalty and security. In outbursts, McCarthy, McCarran and Bridges charged that McLeod "refused" to give security clearance to Bohlen, only to be reversed by Dulles. McLeod, one-time aide to Sen. Bridges, has been publicly silent during the dispute. Dulles insists that there are no differences over the matter between himself and his security chief.

REDS SHORT TOO
Van Fleet acknowledged that the enemy does not have "near as much ammunition" as the Eighth Army. But he said that during and since the ill-fated 1951 armistice talks, the Communists have built up their artillery until they now have "twice as much as we do."

Senators of both parties declared themselves "startled," "shocked" and alarmed by Van Fleet's testimony. Under their questioning, he bitterly criticized the "sitdown" war strategy which he said was forced on him when the armistice negotiations began.

Carlyle Has Lunch With Eisenhower
It was reported that on a previous occasion, when the President was conducting some Congressional guests through the White House, he had shown considerable consternation at finding the Netherlands sword missing. A hurried check by one of his aides revealed that it had been removed to have the scabbard repaired.

Carlyle Has Lunch With Eisenhower

WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower's first visit to North Carolina as President may be a visit to Fort Bragg sometime this year. During the course of one of his White House luncheons given for members of Congress, he told Rep. F. Eriel Carlyle of Lumberton that he is looking forward to visiting the famous North Carolina military post. Just when he will go there, however, still remains uncertain.

Carlyle said Eisenhower also showed great interest in the 42nd Airborne Division, on which the Congressman was able to give the President a good report as he had visited the Fort earlier in the week. The North Carolinian, who sat directly opposite the President at the luncheon last Thursday, said that Democrats outnumbered Republicans almost three to one, as of some 20 guests only six were Republicans.

"And I was happy to see North Carolina cigarettes passed to the guests," said Carlyle.

A tour of the White House, including a visit to the President's trophy room, was one of the high points of the occasion. Carlyle said the handsome pearl-encrusted gold sword, together with its richly decorated scabbard, presented to Eisenhower by the Queen of the Netherlands, was again on display among other lavish mementoes the President had received from leading officials of numerous other foreign countries.
