That's what most fight fans aiways will call Jack Dempsey. And, as the old Manassas Mauler watch as the old Manassas the old was the old was the heat old was the old days.

The Braves, who drew only 110, 403 fans in their first 21 dates in Boston last season, have averaged an amaxing 25,036 for the same number of dates in Milwaukee this year.

Although the Philadelphia Philipse and St. Louis Cardinals also show individual gains, the entire league shows an increase of only 290,786, So, except for the Braves vividiy the days when he was a their old part of the process of the was the old was the a miner, bouncer and tank-town ighter.

Which explains why, when he was launched on his ring career, he was a rough-and-tumble killer who inflamed the imagination.

It was Dempsey and his man-slaughter methods which made the fight game. To him goes the credit for taking the sport out of the barns and smoky back rooms, for his were the fists which made the million dollar gate.

And even now they recall his storied battles as epics: The mad assault on the giant Jess Willard; the furious melee with Luis Angel Firpo, and those two fights with Gene Tunney in which Dempsey made more friends in defeat than he ever had in victory.

Yes, it's been a long time since they saw him weaving and crouching in the ring. But, even though he's 58, they still remember him—and probably always will.

minutes were recorded by Mrs. W. B. Hunter.

Important business for the June meeting was the election of officers for the new year which will begin with the September meeting. Those elected were, Mrs. B. P. Gentry, president; Mrs. Allen M. Shaw, secretary-treasurer.

The program was presented by Mrs. J. G. Layton who gave a resume of the most interesting facts on Alaska, using for part of her talk comments from the book, "A-laska Now." Mrs. Layton had received clippings and snap shots from her daughter, Mrs. Robert Wells, who is making her home in Alaska while her husband is stationed there with the U. S. Army, and these were passed, giving those present a better understanding of the present modern improvements in Alaska, From the help Alaska received under Pres. Woodrow Wilson on thru the terms of Franklin D. Roosevelt, how the big syndicates were halted, and the encouragement given the dust bowl sufferers of the middle west, was sketched by Mrs. Layton, and her hearers were delighted with her presentation of these interesting facts.

Defending champion Moore was the odds-on favorite to retain the title he wrested from Maxim by a decision last December when the two battled in St. Louis.

Rumors that Maxim was having trouble making the 175-pound limit were dispelled by his sparring partners, who reported he had been near the limit for several days. Moore, who seldome has had weight difficulties, was under the limit several days ago.

Locally, Moore, who is 35, was only an 8-5 favorite although outside this area he rated a 3-1 edge over Maxim, who is 31.

Knockout victories were predicted by both managers, Charley Johnson for Moore and Jack Kearns for Maxim.

A secret weapon was to provide the trick for Maxim, according to
