Cameron Acquitted On Driving Charge

Edwin B. Cameron, Kipling lumber merchant, was acquitted of driving drunk in Harnett Record-er's Court on Tuesday after he took the stand to explain that a "sprained leg," not what he drank, caused him to zig-zag his car on the highway.

"I'll give you the benefit of the doubt," commented Judge M. O. Lee who cleared Cameron of the drunken driving charge, but found him guilty of careless and reckless driving. Cameron was fined $100 and costs.

Cameron was arrested last December 28 on highway 15-A near Nellie's Creek bridge. His case—more than eight months old—was the oldest on the calendar of long-standing cases listed earlier this month by Clerk of the Court Robert Morgan.

State witnesses were Patrolman Paul Lucas and Jailer K. C. Matthews. Both said Cameron was "under the influence." Lucas testified Cameron "fumbled for his license, staggered and fell twice, and was highly intoxicated." Matthews corroborated the officer's statement that when Cameron was jailed, he was drinking.

The patrolman told the court that he was parked at the cross roads, one mile North of Lillington, when he heard "brakes squealing" and saw a car zig-zag on the curve of 15-A. Lucas said he followed the car but due to traffic, did not stop it until near the Nellie's Creek bridge. However, Lucas said the Cameron car, never at any time, got over the center "line or on the shoulder."

When the driver was asked for his driver's license, Lucas said Cameron fumbled and once out of the car fell twice before he told Cameron he was under arrest for driving drunk.

Cameron, represented by Attorney W. A. Johnson, took the stand in his own defense. He said that the day of the arrest he had spent several hours with his friend W. L. Matthews in Lillington. As he started to leave the Matthews home Cameron said he stepped on a piece of stove, wood and sprained his leg.

"I was in severe pain and that was why, when I applied the brake on the curve, my car zig-zagged," Cameron said. He also blamed the leg injury for his falls near the car after the arrest.

Defense witnesses were W. L. Matthews Sr. and W. L. Matthews Jr., both of Lillington. The senior Mr. Matthews said that when Cameron left his house, less than 15 minutes before the arrest, he "looked, talked and walked normal."

W. L. Matthews Jr., who accidentally happened to be passing on the highway when the arrest was made, explained: "I stopped to see if I could be of any assistance." He said he knew nothing about Cameron having left his father's house. This witness also said "as far as I could tell, Mr. Cameron was normal."

Attorney Johnson contended that Cameron drove his car fully more than a mile under observation of the officer which he could not have done, had he been drunk as charged.

Edward L. Barker, Lillington, was also cleared of driving drunk, but found guilty of having no operator's license. He was fined $100 and costs. Barker was arrested near the Norwood Brick Mill by Patrolman Herman Ward who said Barker drove by the office in a reckless manner "staggered" when he got out of the car.

However, a defense witness Rupert Myrick, a passenger in the car said Barker appeared normal to him. Louis Smith, who said he also knew Barker, was at the scene of the arrest and said he saw no signs of drinking.
