Cooperative Warehouse Wilson Operates

SAN FRANCISCO (P)—
The talk about bringing major league baseball to the West Coast is a "tempest in a teapot," Bill Veeck, owner of the St. Louis Browns said today after completing a two-city survey of Pacific Tress two warehouses have set to survey of Pacific Tress two warehouses have a comtwo-city survey of Pacific These two warehouses have a com-bined selling area of 256,758 square Coast possibilities.

"There isn't a ball park ready for major league baseball on the West Coast," Veeck said, "and until there is, I can't see how there can be much talk of moving an American League franchise here."

Veeck is here exploring possibilities that would allow him onove his St. Louis Browns franchise he a more profitable city.

NO CONCLUSION
"However," he said, "you must remember that I am visiting many cities and no conclusion has been reached yet. I must report to an American League committee my findings. Until that time, there can be no possible decision made."

In Chicago, Vice Presidents

The Chicago, Vice President Charles Comissey of the Chicago White Sox announced that Veeck had been authorized by a committee composed of himself, Tom Yaw-keep of the Boston Red Sox and keep of the Boston Red Sox and watter Briggs of the Detroit Tigers, to hunt for a new location for the Browns. Baltimore, now in the International League, apparently has first call on the proposed move. However, Veeck admitted that he was not overlooking any possibilities.

IMPLEMENTS INCOME

Growers deserves the consideration of every tobacco farmer whethe selling time arrives. It offers him a means of implementing his income by participating, in the profits usual to the sale of his tobacco on the warehouse floor. It enables his to own a segment of the marketing apparatus through which he must sell his crop. It offers him the opportunity of both owning the facilities for marketing his tobacco and of sharing in its sale. Cooperative tobacco sales warehouses are now being operated on four of the leading markets in the North Caroling, flue-cuted area, Wilson Kinston, Greenville and Lumberton. Of these, Growers is the oldest, and largest; Now beginning its sixth year, it has sold more than ten per cent of the tobacco-sold on the Wilson market for the past five years.
