Federal Deficit Of Year Is Cut To 5.5 Billions

WASHINGTON (P) - A slowdown in defense spending may cut this year's federal deficit to about $5,500,000,

That is a little more than half of the $10,300,000,000 deficit for this $153 fiscal year which the administration predicted four months ago and it is only 38 per cent of the $14,400,000,000 deficit which President Truman foresaw when he sent his budget message to Congress last January.

Government experts said that a lag in defense spending, which has never been fully explained to the public, is mainly responsible for teeping the Treasury from going as deep in the red as expected.

Tax collections have been running a little higher than the Treasury anticipated, but not much. It now appears that the government will take in about $69,000,000,000 once the public is significantly was a superiously thought.

LESS SPENDING

The big change which has thrown the administration's guesses out of titler has been in spending. The experts now figure that it will run about $74,500,000,000 instead of $79,000,000,800.

Congress helped to put a crimp in spending by cutting many of President Truman's budget requests. But all of the Congressional cuts were supposedly taken into account last August, when the Treasury revised the expected deficit downward from $14,400,000,000 to $10,300,000,000.
