T E L Class Meeting Held At Duncan Home Tuesday

The T E L Class of First Baptist Church met on Tuesday evening at eight for their December meeting and Christmas party at the home of Mrs. R. A. Duncan, Sr., with Mrs. Leale Parker and Mrs. V. J. Rice as associate hostesses.

Mrs. Locke Campbell, class president, presided and Mrs. Kate Wiggins gave the devotional using the third chapter of John as the scripture basis.

Committee reports were heard and plans were made to cheer the shut-ins during the holiday season. Mrs. Lynwood Sills entertained the ladies with Christmas music on the accordion and group singing was enjoyed.

Guests were then invited into the dining room where a red and silver cloth adorned the table which held a lovely centerpiece of silver pine, birch, magnolia leaves and red berries. Tall red tapers cast a soft glow over the beautiful appointments.

From opposite ends of the table, Mrs. Parker poured punch and Mrs. Rice served coconut snowballs. The 24 members and visitors exchanged gifts from under the pretty Christmas tree.

Bandit

Hornbeck, rifled the cash drawer and were preparing to leave when they saw their stolen car when they saw that the place was ringed with police.

Quickly they released their two victims, forced them at pistol point out the door ahead of them as a shield and made for their car. Officers, fearful of hitting the two hostages, held their fire momentarily.

Hornbeck and Goldman opened the car door, but the cops had been there first, taking the keys of the getaway vehicle.
Desperate now, the fugitives forgot their hostages and wheeled to meet police guns, firing as they turned.

The pair then jumped into Quanhoffer's nearby car, taking the hostages with them. Patrol Sgt. Bill Johnston blasted the rear tires with a riot gun, immobilizing that car, too. One of the desperadoes hurriedly got out the back door of the car and the beam shined Robinson in flight. Three shots rang out and Robinson was dead, Police believe Goldman killed him.

Still holding their hostages, Hornbeck and Goldman fled across an open field that was turned bright with the headlights from police cars. It was there that the desperadoes escaped, scrambling from inside their arm holds and leaping into a ditch. Police immediately opened fire, apparently hitting Goldman with the shot that proved fatal.

Hornbeck separated from his companion and reached the nearby home of B. E. Holbrook. He barged in with drawn guns and demanded Holbrook's car keys. The frightened man went to the closet for them and reached within inches of his naked shotgun without grabbing it.

"I couldn't see killing a man for a slight decrease in 1952, according to the farm census summary issued today by the State Department of Agriculture. On Jan. 1, 1952, there were 1,488,918 people living on farms in North Carolina but as of Jan. 1, 1953, the farm population had dropped to 1,467,793.

stealing a car," he told police.

GAVE UP MEKELY
Patrolman J. C. Patrick spotted Hornbeck emerging from the Holbrook home and gave chase, catching him about 40 miles away. Hornbeck gave up meekly, saying he had never fired a shot during the night's battle.

Goldman wasn't so lucky. He got only one-half mile away, on foot and crawling. His body, a gaping wound in the head, was found about daylight.

Ike

allies steamed from a report from Paris. Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson was quoted as saying the Eisenhower administration is prepared to seek legislation permitting this country to share with NATO "pertinent information on nuclear and other weapons."

The President said certain changes in the law must be made before this country can realize the full value of its allies.

BELIEVES IN SHARING
Eisenhower said it is foolish to think that this country should not share some kind of information with allies. He explained, however, that there is no intent to give any other country information on production of atomic weapons.

Reporters attempted to find out specifically whether Eisenhower will ask Congress to authorize the placing of atomic weapons in the hands of U. S. allies.

That, he said, would depend entirely upon circumstances. If a war started, the United States would have to use any weapon it possessed to its best advantage, the President said. If other nations could assist by using these weapons to a better advantage than our own forces, he added, then that would be a prime topic for consideration.
