Fashion Accessories Acclaimed Astonishing

Next week leading designers will preview spring and summer fashions for visiting editors in New York City for the semi-annual fashion shows sponsored by the New York Dress Institute. We will carry daily stories on the most significant developments in women's styles.

NEW YORK — Astonishing is the only word to describe all of the accessories now being previewed for spring and summer.

They include the biggest earrings the smallest neckties, the zaniest costume jewelry in the memory of modern woman. Yet prices are low enough to permit any girl a fling at an accessory counter.

Copping men's fashions led to some of the new ideas. There are cuff links galore to go with increasingly-popular man-tailored shirts designed for women. One company even has cuff bracelets with removable cuff-links—you just snap the bracelet around the shirt cuff and fasten the links through both bracelet and buttonholes.

Tiny copies of high-priced men's neckties are newcomers designed to add a finished look to those shirt collars. They are shaped and patterned just like a man's fourth-hand, only about one-third the size.

A woman's scarf company has a whole group of mannish knitted neckties, ribbon versions of the old string neckties, and polka-dot ties that clip under a girl's shirt collar.

At the other extreme are billowing stoles, some made of yards of paisley jersey, and a few new stoles of jersey with crisp straw fringe.

We can thank science more than fashion for the newest, biggest earrings. Without the development of airy-light aluminum and a new gold tinting process, such shoulder-length chunks of metal could never be held up by an ear lobe.

The longer, dripper look, one costume jewelry executive described the new earrings. Gold-finished filigreed balls dangle, shoulder length, three inches below the ears.

Bright color is a special feature of the costume jewelry. A sea-going line of bright enamel pins include things like a coral angler fish with rhinestone fins, a turquoise sea horse with a pear-shaped pearl for a tail, and a brilliant enamel star fish in various colors.

Colored stones shine from costume jewelry bracelets. Even summer white is combined with brightly-colored beads or with gold. Pastel leather bracelets are part of the new look.

Then there are upper-arm bracelets, to coil above the elbow and frosty-toned beads to wear with cottons.

Mr. Kellstadt thus becomes "the first Southern merchant to be so honored for public service other than in purely business activities", according to J. Gordon Dakins, Executive Vice-President of the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

Mr. Kellstadt is well-known in the South as the engineer of Sears' Southern expansion program which has seen over thirty new stores, a new mail order plant, and several Sears-owned factories built in the South since the war. A leader in bringing industry to the South, he has enlarged Sears' pattern of buying in the South to the point that his company last year bought over $450 million in Dixie-made merchandise from over 800 Southern factories. In many states, Sears now buys far more than it sells.

A native of Columbus, Ohio, Mr. Kellstadt was made a Sears vice president and director in 1949. He assumed direction of the Southern Territory in 1950.

Under his leadership, Sears has set in motion a far-flung series of agricultural development projects designed to support 4-H Clubs, Future Farmers of America, and the many other organizations striving

Golden Anniversary Celebration Held

On the occasion of their Golden Wedding Anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Warren were honored at a lovely reception Sunday afternoon from 4:00 until 6:00 at the home of their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Alton Jackson on Dunn, Route 1.

Guests were greeted at the door by Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Warren and introduced to the receiving line composed of Mr. and Mrs. Alton Jackson, the honored couple, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Warren, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Warren, N. D. Warren and J. C. Williams. The bride of fifty years wore an orchid corsage and Mr. Warren a yellow rose bud in his lapel. Others receiving throughout the house wore yellow mums.

The golden motif prevailed throughout the spacious home with arrangements of Magnolia leaves, yellow chrysanthemums and candles forming the decorations. Max Jackson and Miss Pat Tew presided over the register and Mr. and Mrs. Elton Warren directed guests into the dining room. Mrs. N. D. Warren poured punch and Mrs. Nick DeMal served bridal cakes from opposite ends of the beautifully appointed table. A handsome white cut work cloth adorned the table and bows of yellow satin ribbon centered with yellow mums were used on the corners. The three-tiered cake topped with veiling throughout the house wore
