CHANGED COURSE
The company lawyers also claim that Jernigan had established a course of practice of paying his premiums late until just before the date of disappearance and that he suddenly changed this course and paid premiums in advance of their due date.

The insurance company also contends that after Jernigan went into bankruptcy in 1951, he made a composition with his creditors, "but has not in all respects complied with said composition" and that for several months prior to the date of disappearance "was again in serious financial difficulties."

"We will attempt to prove that these circumstances support our contention of a well-conceived plan for disappearance," Smith said.

Mrs. Jernigan's appearance Saturday will be her first sworn statement about her husband's disappearance.

Recently, however, a deposition hearing was held to take testimony from two of her witnesses, Thomas Aman, who was with Jernigan on the fishing trip and the only eye witness to the reported drowning, and Floyd Cox, who lives nearby.

FRAME-UP DENIED
At that hearing, Attorney Smith charged, through cross-examination of Aman that there was a "frame-up" for Jernigan's disappearance.

Insurance company attorneys asked Aman if he did not know that "three witnesses saw Jernigan climb out of this water, walk across a vacant lot and get into an automobile."

"As far as I know," Aman replied, "he is at the bottom of the ocean."

Aman vigorously denied that he was paid money for helping carry out such a plot.

The hearing will be held at 10 o'clock Saturday in the county courthouse.

gan asking that various policies be voided on grounds that he made false statements in his applications for insurance.

Mrs. Jernigan is represented by Attorneys Duncan C. Wilson, W.A. Johnson and H. Paul Strickland, who say the claim that Jernigan is still alive is "ridiculous to be believed."

MAHONE TO TESTIFY
Earl H. Mahone, vice president of the First Citizens Bank and Trust Co., co-plaintiff in the suits against Jefferson Standard, will also be examined at the same time. The bank became a party to the suits after it loaned Mrs. Jernigan money on the insurance policies, which were then assigned to the bank as security.

The insurance company attorneys, claiming that Jernigan is still alive and did not drown as reported, say they will also prove that Jernigan's estate was insolvent and that Jernigan was insured far beyond his ability to pay.

Smith and McLeod argued at a recent hearing on continuance of the trial that Jernigan was bankrupt. They also claimed that Jernigan and his wife had other members of their family had entered into a scheme to "kite" checks he had about $10,000 in worthless checks out at the time of his disappearance.

In one of their affidavits, the Jefferson Standard claims that Jernigan for some months prior to his reported drowning "had entered upon a program of obtaining a large amount of insurance, particularly during the period from a bout the middle of June until shortly before the day of the reported drowning."

CLAIMS SELF-DEFENSE
Vinson, pleading innocent, claimed self-defense. He told the jury he shot Williams because he "threatened to cut off my head." On examination by Defense Attorney Nelly Salmon, Vinston related that Theodore Williams and his brother, Mann, came to the store about 9 p. m.

Vinson said when Williams opened his knife he told him to close it and that Williams refused.

"I knew the brothers were drinking and I hoped they would leave," said Vinston. "At the time I had my pistol which I always carry at the store in my belt."

Vinson claimed that a few minutes later he turned from the counter and found Theodore Williams at his back with a knife held at his throat. He said Williams knifed him in the back at least once and that Mann Williams seized both his hands and pushed them into the air over his head. He testified the two brothers then dragged him to the door and threw him face downward in a mud puddle outside.

In the tussle, he related, the gun fell on the ground but Vinston said he finally recovered it. He said he was afraid they would get his gun and turn it on him. He related that Theodore "came back" at him threatening to cut off his head so he fired.

Earlier, the State put on Mann Williams, brother of the dead man, who said they tried to take the gun from the proprietor to keep him from shooting them. He denied there was any knife and officers testified they found no knife at the scene.

Card tables were set up for the bingo games and little Susan Cooper of Falcon presented prizes to the winners. While the games were in progress, the hostesses passed pop corn, cookies, home-made fudge and Coca-Cola.

The dining room table was beautifully appointed and centered with an exact replica of a bridal bouquet. On either end rested corsages of white carnations which were removed and presented to the honorees. Yellow candles in silver holders illuminated the entire setting.

Pastel cloths covered the auxiliary tables which held pastel nosegays and a delicious chicken salad plate with potato chips, deviled eggs and coffee was served.

a verdict of manslaughter and the other six men guilty.

Williams died on February 22, 1953 from pistol wounds in the head received in a fracas at the twenty-two-foot store Vinston ran near Bunnlevel. Officers found Williams dead on the ground a few feet from the store, or "joke joint," as the prosecutors called it.

Records Prove

all he had to do was give the word," Lennon said.

"It's all a matter of public record but the people of the state don't know about it," he said. "They should know about the U. S. 70 bypass across his farms with all the under and over passes so his cow can leisurely stroll back and forth between pastures."

HE GOT PAID
He said he did not remember the exact figures but that it was a matter of public record that Scott had been paid about $14,000 for the bypass right-of-way.

He also said that the public should know the facts but there would be "cries of mud-slinging" if his supporters attempted to make them known.

Lennon asserted Scott took credit for the $2 million secondary road building program in the state, "but he opposed it in his campaign for governor."

Alamance County records show that the State Highway Commission in November, 1953, paid Scott a total of $12,955 for the right-of-way across his property for the U. S. 70 bypass.

Records also show that the Nelson L. Tess Construction Co. of Durham in February, 1951, leased 34.3 acres of Scott's property adjacent to the bypass project for a gravel and stone quarry, with a minimum rent of $2,500 for five years.

The five-year lease, with a five-year option clause, provides for a minimum annual rent of $500 and a five cents royalty per ton above 10,000 tons annually.

Vinson denied getting out his pistol until he was cut. His blue coat with blood stains and slip in back and trousers with dirt and blood stains on the knees were entered as evidence by the defense.

Throughout cross-examination, Vinston maintained he did not draw the pistol until after he was cut. He admitted he talked to check on the man he had shot. He said he was cut himself and was rushed to the hospital. He readily admitted that he sent his son, Halford, to the house for a shotgun after Theodore was cut, because Williams was still after me," he said his pistol snapped twice but failed to fire.

Vinson at first told the court he had never before the murder been convicted of any offense, but on cross-examination by the State admitted he had been indicted for assaulting his wife.

An array of witnesses gave Vinston a good character and described the dead man as "dangerous and troublesome."

Safety Official Speaks at Benson

"Highway tragedies do not end on our highways," Major Charles A. Speed of the State Motor Vehicle Department stated at a meeting of the Benson Lions and Kiwanis Clubs last night at Meadow High School.

Elaborating on the statement, Major Speed told the civic clubs that the tragedies often leave widowed mothers who are left with the problem of supporting children and giving them an education. In many cases the mothers are forced to leave the home to make bread for the family, Speed told the clubs.

The State official urged the clubs to work with the Department of Motor Vehicles to end slaughter of human life and the destruction of property on North Carolina Highways.

Speed told the group of the many problems facing highway patrol who are placed on the law enforcement staff. He also cited many highway accidents and told the results of the tragedies.

The speaker was introduced to the group by Joe Allalla. Pat Johnson, assistant director of the Institute of government at Chapel Hill, was also introduced to the civic clubs.

C. N. Proctor is president of the Benson Kiwanis, and Shelton Moore heads the Lions Club.

Two Injured In Four-Way Wreck

Two people are in the Dunn Hospital badly injured as the result of a four-vehicle accident involving an ambulance and three other vehicles late Friday afternoon.

The injured are Mrs. Hattie E. Vann, 63, of Dunn, Route 2, and her son, Mack E. Vann, 17. Mrs. Vann suffered back injuries and side injuries. Her son received bruises, lacerations and possible internal injuries.

The accident occurred when the 1951 Mercury, driven by Mrs. Vann, went out of control on the slippery pavement, ran off the left side of the road and overturned.

An ambulance driven by Paul Drew of Dunn was called to the scene. The ambulance skidded to the left side of the road and ran into a 1951 Chevrolet pick-up truck, which had been parked there by Robert Draughon of Dunn. The pick-up truck was knocked into a 1946 Ford, owned by G. D. McNeill and also parked by the road. The truck and the Ford had been parked by motorists who stopped to view the accident.

Damage to the Mercury was estimated at $300; damage to the ambulance $300, and damage to the Ford was put at $100.

Patrolman David Matthews, who investigated, said no charges were preferred.

President Strickland of the Rotary Club today expressed gratitude for the interest shown by Congressman Carlyle and for the action he is taking.

"It is significant," he said, "that Mr. Carlyle didn't wait to be asked to take this action. He took the initiative himself, and the people of Dunn and Harnett County prelate it."

He was the nation's top authority on airborne warfare. After establishing America's first airborne regiment and the parachute school, he was named commander of the famed 101st Airborne Division, trained it and took it to England in preparation for the invasion. He suffered a heart attack however, and was returned to the States just before the invasion. He died about a year later.

President John Strickland of the Dunn Rotary Club recently named a committee to ask North Carolina's General Assembly to establish a memorial here to Gen. Lee On the Rotary committee are Dr. Glenn L. Hooper, chairman, Adams Dr. Charlie Byrd, George Franklin Blalock and Edward Wade L.
