Another regular, Jackie Gleason, did his last show of the season tonight, and in his 7 p.m. Saturday spot on CBS for the summer will be an hour's variety program featuring Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey and their band.

This is Gleason's own "package" by the way. The comedian not only figures to pick up some extra money with his own programming firm, but he also can thus keep a finger on the quality of the entertainment that uses his a'r time. Experts connected with Gleason's own show are running the Dorsey program, which is called "Stage Show."

Jackie's idea for the program is that it should be run off just like a variety show in a big thaster which is a somewhat different technique than is used for the typical TW variety entertainment. A top comedian and recording star and four or five leading variety each week.
