LITTLE NOTES ABOUT PEOPLE AND THINGS

Margaret Ohison of the Michigan State College food and nutrition department, and Pearl Swanson, home economics teacher at Iowa State College, declared the other day that modern woman's easy living has put extra pounds under her girdle...

"The trouble at the hotel probably never would have occurred, except that I was fearfully nervous after my airport experience. When we finally got to the hotel I discovered that the studio representatives had put me in the Gloria Hotel instead of the Copacabana as I had asked them to do.

He got on his knees and begged me to stay, saying that it would be such bad publicity for the hotel if I left. By this time I was worn out.

Flat Look Gives Way To Curves

PARIS (AP)—Paris fashion houses decreed today that a woman's bust should be where it always belonged.

Thus, the flat look gave way to the round look for women with "matronly measurements."

Yesterday's opening show featured Lucile Manguin's "reed" silhouette which takes matronly measurements into consideration.

Hinson Committed To State Hospital

Linzo Hinson, 41-year-old Dunn man charged with a variety of offenses, including first degree burglary, has been committed to the criminally insane division of the State Hospital for a mental examination, it was disclosed today by Sheriff Claude R. Moore.

He was taken into custody two weeks ago during a wild spree in which he allegedly broke into the home of a girl friend, fired shotgun blasts into the home of her father, and threatened to kill Sheriff Claude R. Moore and two of his deputies.

Sheriff Moore said Hinson was committed to the hospital for a 30-day period of observation and examination on an order signed by Superior Court Judge Chester Morris, who is now presiding over courts in this district.

The action was instituted by Mrs. Elizabeth Matthews, Clerk of Court, on request of Defense Attorney Charles Lee Guy, Jr. of Dunn, who says he is convinced Hinson is mentally unbalanced.

Hinson is a member of a well-to-do Dunn family.

DISRUPTED JAIL After his confinement to the county jail, Hinson refused to eat, threw food back through the bars into the face of a Negro jail aide and, according to Jailer Lee Upchurch, "talked crazy."

He also succeeded in tearing the plumbing out of one cell in the jail. Jailer Upchurch described him as "trying to prove himself a tough customer."

After allegedly breaking into the home of his girl friend, Mrs. Mattie A. Watson, on Dunn, Route 3, Hinson eluded officers for more than 12 hours.

During this time, he phoned the wife of Sheriff Moore and also called Dunn police and advised them to warn the Sheriff and his deputies to call off his men in their search for him.

REVEALED MURDER PLANS After his arrest, he told officers of his plan to murder Mrs. Watson and her father, William Moore.

While in custody, he also suggested that he and his victims

Love Slayers Get Third Postponement

For the third time an extradition hearing has been delayed in the case of a 23-year-old wife and her lover, charged with the murder of her husband in Harnett on December 14.

Harnett Sheriff Claude R. Moore said today that he had received a letter from Michigan authorities advising him that the hearing, set for January 31, had been postponed to Thursday, February 3.

This was the third delay. The hearings was first set for January 10, then postponed to January 31, and now delayed until Thursday. Sheriff Moore said the Detroit police authorities gave him no reason for the third delay.

"I guess," said the sheriff, "they must have hired some lawyers to delay the case for them."

Sheriff Moore added, "We're ready any time and are anxious to get them back to Harnett to stand trial."

District Solicitor Jack Hooks has indicated he will ask the death penalty for the pair.

Seeking Funds To Encourage Private Firms

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower asked Congress today to help expand private health programs through a federal reinsurance plan designed to achieve "better health for a stronger America."

The reinsurance proposal embodied in a broad eight-point program to provide better medical care for more persons, was substantially the same as that turned down by Congress last year.

In a special message on the health needs of the nation, the President said all his proposals "encourage private effort, with private funds," and with the cooperation of the states and medical profession can "form the basis for better health for all."

In addition to the controversial reinsurance program, he proposed greater federal aid for public assistance cases such as the aged and the blind, government insurance for private mortgage loans for construction of hospitals and clinics, and federal grants to state vocational education agencies for training of nurses.

He did not estimate in his message how much the whole program would cost, but some estimate of the cost was given in his budget.

FEDERAL INSURANCE The federal reinsurance proposal called for an initial authorization of 25 million dollars. It would encourage private health insurance companies to offer "better protection, particularly against expensive illness" and to extend coverage to additional millions.

The government would underwrite the program by setting up a revolving fund to reinsure private plans against part of the additional risk resulting from expanded coverage. The private companies would decide whether they wished to join the plan.

To stimulate construction of health facilities, he proposed an appropriation of 10 1-2 million which would permit the secretary of health, education, and welfare to insure, "for a small premium," mortgage loans made by private lending institutions for such buildings.

To increase greater federal aid for public assistance cases, he proposed in his budget that 20 million be appropriated.

The President said the sweeping program he offered represents "a broad and coordinated offensive against many of the problems which must be solved if we are to have better health for a stronger America."

"As a nation," he said, "we are doing less than now lies within our power to reduce the impact of disease."

NEW YORK (AP)—An unknown "woman in brown" added a new note of mystery today to the strange slaying of Serge Rubinstein.

At the same time, a woman who said she was a "dear friend" of Rubinstein's said he told her three weeks ago he was worried about death threats which he had received.

Modern Still Is Found With Lights, Running Water, Etc.

Federal ATU Agent C. S. Coats today reported the discovery of "the most modern" whiskey still in his long experience as an officer, and said it was also found in a unique hiding place—in a tobacco ordering pit.

The still had running water, electric lights, was fired by gas and even had a four-inch terra cotta pipe line for draining the waste mash from the still to the hog pasture.

Agent Coats said the 100-gallon copper still of top grade quality was located in the tobacco ordering pit under the pack barn of Nokelee Barefoot in Banner Township.

Barefoot was freed under $500 bond for his appearance in the Benson Recorder's Court on charges of possession for the purpose of manufacturing illegal whiskey.

The still was running full blast when found and there were 21 barrels of mash and a gallon of whiskey at the still site.

Officers making the raid, in addition to Coats, were: Woodrow Massengill, Hugh Lamm, Ersaleen

Creech, J. T. Smith and E. O. Beasley.

OTHER STILLS FOUND In another raid in Banner Township between Dunn and Benson, officers found a 100-gallon copper still and six barrels of beer on the premises of Harvey Johnson. Johnson was also ordered to appear in the Benson court on charges of possessing a still.

On the same day, the officers found in the same township a 400-gallon submarine still and a 50-gallon copper outfit, but these stills were not in operation and no arrests were made.
