The Truth About Ava

to a frazzle and didn't see why I had to be uncomfortable just to give his hotel the right sort of publicity and I told him as much.

"He said then that he wasn't charging the studio anything for the room and that he was giving me a big press reception for free. This made me so mad at the studio that I threw my cocktail glass on the floor and said they had no right to subject me to such annoyances.

"I told Dave Hanna to help me to the hotel entrance and get a cab. Then the manager of the hotel really went to work. He made a wreck of the room, threw empty bottles around, mused up the bed and made the suite look as if wild parties had been toed in there for a couple of weeks. I was only in the place about 15 minutes.

"Then he called the press and told them he had had to order me to leave. This was his idea of saving face. He didn't care what he did to my face. I then had a press conference myself and told the whole story.

"The second day the stories were very favorable to me and the hotel manager was criticized. But those stories never reached the United States. All you read up here was the wild parties I threw. I was ill at ease in Rio and got out of there as quickly as possible."

Instead of staying five days as scheduled, Ava planned back for New York less than 48 hours after her Rio landing.

The inarticulate farm girl who married Mickey Rooney and was prodded by second-mate Arty Shaw to read weighty books has become an extremely articulate observer of the social panorama abroad and in this country.

"The Communists," she observed, "have sneaked into all the Latin-American countries. Sneaked? I guess I don't mean that. They just moved in boldly. There was nothing sneaky about it."

SHE QUOTES ADLAI AT DROP OF A HAT

Right now, her big hero is Adlai Stevenson, who inadvertently brought her together with Frank Sinatra in one of their many reconciliations, when the two appeared jointly for Stevenson during his unsuccessful Presidential campaign in 1952.

"Ava," reports Florabel Muir, "The News correspondent, 'drops quotes from Stevenson at the drop of the hat. I never knew Adlai made so many wonderful cracks as she attributes to him, but maybe I've been underestimating the guy.'"

Following his discharge, Anderson entered Utah State University at Logan, Utah, to continue his engineering studies. Later, he returned to Dunn and took a position with the Godwin construction firm.

Never let us be accused of arguing with a lady . . . No, indeed . . . We're all for the women, God bless 'em—the skinny ones, the fat ones, the Monroes, the Diors, the in-betweens and all the rest . . . Besides arguing with a woman is like arguing with a preacher—you can't win . . . Little Doc Corbet was happy Saturday night because Villanova beat State College . . . Doc simply has no use for the Wolf-pack, none at all . . . "Couldn't be because State beat Wake Forest, could it, Doc?" . . . "Well," he laughed, "I'm a strong Wake Forest man, you know." . . . Pretty Miss Reba Wheatley was one of the most glamorous of the fair maidens at Shirley Baird's birthday dance Saturday night . . . She's gonna be a real heart-breaker one of these days . . . There are two empty houses out on North Ellis Avenue and they've been empty for several days—believe it or not.

"I just can't understand," said Gilbert Porter, "why the people who own those houses don't run an ad in The Daily Record. They could rent them in a matter of hours." . . . Porter had just advertised a house "and I had it rented less than an hour after The Record came out." . . . "By the way," he reported . . . "There's no use to run it any more."

"That's the only trouble with The Record getting such good results . . . People insert a classified ad to run four or five times; one time does the trick and we lose the rest of the insertions. . . . But those satisfied advertisers keep coming back for more. . . ."

BIRTHDAYS: Sunday was the birthday of Jimmy Carroll . . . Today is the birthday of Marvin Wade and Claud L. Smith.

THINGAMAJIGS: Marie Craven is a very dutiful young wife . . . She writes her husband overseas long letters daily . . . She was mailing him two letters Saturday . . . "And they were eight pages apiece," she smiled . . . Marie was telling us all about her husband, says he plays the piano real well and is in demand for dances at the officers' club, etc. . . . Just pure wife pride! . . . "Golly," said a visitor in Dunn the other night, "whiskey must be getting scarce around this town . . . It took me 10 minutes to find a pint tonight; I can usually get it delivered to me in five minutes." . . . He musta been thirsty . . . Speaking of the town's morals, reports that a house of ill fame is operating in the southwestern part of town and not true . . . We checked with a fellow who would know and this was his answer: "Goodness, No . . . It wouldn't pay in Dunn; the girls would starve to death. . . . Too many non professionals here. . . . That's what he said—and he knows! . . . Incidentally, there's a story in the new Coronet entitled, "Are Small Towns Immoral?" . . . A North Carolina town is among those discussed . . . In the same issue, Judy Garland gives some advice on "How Not to Love a Woman," and Grace Kelly makes the cover of Time Magazine this week with an article in which she says, "Gentlemen prefer ladies." . . . Corporal Rommie Williamson got his copy of The Daily Record out of the Post Office and was drooling over that picture of Ava Gardner on the front page . . . "Are you reading that series on Ava?" we asked: "Do you know anybody who isn't?" he shot back with a big smile . . . All we know is that street and newsstand sales have increased about 200 a day since it started and many new subscribers have been added . . . Fannie Sue Turnage says the girls at Meredith have been reading it, too . . . Ava's niece is a student there . . . A number of Smithfield citizens have written for copies containing the stories . . . "The Grass Roots Opera presentation of "Pagliacci," set for Feb. 7 at Campbell, has been getting good reviews . . . Don't miss it.

SCENE OF MURDER—A police laboratory truck stands outside the New York apartment house where financier Serge Rubinstein was murdered in his third-floor bedroom (arrow). The room was disarranged, and police believe a close and personal friend committed the murder.

Girls Quizzed In Slaying

TWO THREATENING NOTES The woman, Ann Borshuk, said Rubinstein had told her then that two threatening notes had been tied to rocks and thrown through his window. Police confirmed that one note said "You have your warning. Next time you won't walk away. Pay your debts."

Rubinstein's 84-year old aunt, Eugenia Forrester, told police she was awake at what she thought was about 1 a. m. when a light was turned on in her room. She said she looked up to see a fully-clad woman, "dressed in brown," standing by the light switch.

Apparently seeing she was in the wrong room, the woman turned off the light and disappeared, Mrs. Forrester said.

Rubinstein's 78-year-old mother, Stella, said she also saw the woman in brown, walking down the stairway to the third floor, where Rubinstein slept.

UNCERTAIN IF SAME WOMAN

Police said there is no certainty that both women saw the same person.

Police said Rubinstein gave house keys to a number of young girls so they could enter whenever they were summoned. When Rubinstein became tired of his current group of girl friends, police said, he had the lock changed on the door and issued new keys to those he still wanted.

Detectives said it is highly possible that one particular girl saw her days of favor were close to an end and gave or sold her key to the killers.

It is being considered, police said, that an ex-prisonmate of Rubinstein's got the key, planning a robbery job but bungled the job and fled after killing him.

MONEY AND WOMEN

Money and women, the two major interests in Serge Rubinstein's life, undoubtedly led to his death, police indicated today.

An almost endless parade of beautiful showgirls, actresses and models were questioned by police in an attempt to learn whether jealousy or thwarted love might have led to the millionaire playboy's murder.

SIX BOOKS FULL

Chief of Detectives Thomas Nielson said scores of women, listed in six loose-leaf address books found in Rubinstein's home, would be questioned.

"Every name in them will be checked and every person who can be given a knife apiece "and then we'll see who lives and who dies." Officers said he talked all kinds of nonsense, intermingled with threats.

Jailer Upchurch quoted Hinson as saying, "I'm going to be just as hateful and mean as I can in jail." He said he overheard Hinson telling another prisoner, "I'm going to act like I'm crazy because they won't kill a crazy man."

Rural Policeman Clarence Moore walked right up on Hinson and took him into custody in the face of a cocked shotgun.

cannot afford to pay the costs of medical care when it is needed, and they are not protected by adequate health insurance.

PERSONAL SHORTAGE

"Too frequently the local hospitals, clinics or nursing homes required for the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of disease either do not exist or are badly out of date. Finally, there are critical shortages of the trained personnel required to study, prevent, treat and control disease."

Modern Still

rests were made.

The officers also found a 75-gallon copper still, 12 barrels of mash and 16 gallons of whiskey at another location in Banner Township. Coats said the still was in operation at the time, but operators were warned of the officers' approach by look-outs who fired guns and managed to escape.

They also found another 300-gallon still in Banner Township during the same series of raids. The still was not in operation and no arrests were made.

be located will be questioned," Nielson said.

Betty Reed, the tall, willowy platinum blonde soprano who collapsed and went into seclusion after learning of Rubinstein's death, was questioned for three hours Friday night and released early today.

Chief Inspector Edward Feeley said Miss Reed, Rubinstein's most frequent "date" recently, had been "cooperative, but could shed no light on the slaying."

Police concentrated their investigation on the woman in the financial wizard's life because Serge had few men friends close enough to him to go unerringly to his bedroom in the dark of night without disturbing other members of the household.
