Dunn Negro Officer Dies Here At 53

Negro Policeman John Brookington, never ill in his life, died last night at the age of 53, three hours after he was taken to the hospital for what started as a digestive upset.

Shortly after eating a small lunch and drinking some strong coffee, Brookington began to feel sick. Taken to the hospital in a police car, he complained of a fullness in the chest and pains in the middle of his back going down into his leg.

At 7:10 he was dead—the victim of a coronary occlusion. A blood clot out of his circulation. His wife, Rowena, arrived at the hospital a few moments after he passed away.

ONE OF FIRST
Brook, as he was known, was one of the first two negroes to be employed here on the police force. He policed the color district for the past four years. Dunn had been his home for sixteen years.

"Everybody liked Brook," a fellow policeman said, "he got along fine and he was friendly. He had to shoot a man once, but he always did his job right."

Brook was a native of Florence, South Carolina, where his mother still lives. He married his wife in Dunn, and there are four surviving children—James, Grender, Catherine, and Mrs. Dorothy Johnson of Baltimore.

His father, James Brookington, is dead. He has two brothers and two sisters still living, and they are believed to live in Baltimore.

Before he became a policeman, Brook worked as a carpenter. Funeral arrangements are still incomplete. The body is at the Dafford Funeral Home.

Soldiers Took Part in Tests

25TH DIV., HAWAII — Army Pfc Bobby F. Sorrell, 20, whose wife, Shirley, lives on Route 1, Angier, and Army Pvt Bobby J. Back, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan O. Black, Rt. 3, Lillington recently took part in battalion training tests held by the 25th Infantry Division on the Island of Hawaii.

The exercise was divided into three phases—a tactical march, attack and capture of an objective and withdrawal and defense. The island is about 200 miles from his unit's home station at Schofield Barracks on Oahu.

Sorrell, a tank crewman in Company C of the division's 89th Tank Battalion, entered the Army in September 1-54. Sorrell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Sorrell, Angier, N. C.

Black, an assistant gunner in Company K of the division's 14th Regiment, entered the Army in October, 1954.

Back attended Shawtown High School in Lillington.

Good Idea

JAMESTOWN, N. D. (P) — The Jamestown High School coach, Ernest Gates, has issued an ultimatum to his prospective football players. There will be no "duck-tail, oxtail, broomhandle or any other fad haircuts. Boys will be boys, but mine are going to look like boys."

Little Things

He was also a big friendly dog who loved everybody, especially children.

When Mr. Strickland went home for breakfast Monday morning, The Duke, of course, went, too. He knew when mealtime rolled around just as good as his master and he didn't have to be called. When he saw Mr. Strickland heading for his car, he automatically jumped in.

If you've ever seen an aristocratic sight, it was The Duke perched in the back seat of that Cadillac with his head thrown high, his tongue curled around the corner of his mouth and wearing his best bulldog manner. In a way, he reminded you of how a real Duke ought to look.

The end came when The Duke hopped out of the car and ran into the street in front of a school bus. Heartbroken, Mr. Strickland gathered up The Duke's bruised and battered body and rushed him down to Dr. Belmont Kittrell's dog hospital. But a few minutes later The Duke was no longer for this earth.

We've been sad ever since Preston Smith told us about Duke's passing. For a year or more we had been planning to take some pictures of The Duke. We even bought a tophat about a year ago. We were going to dress up the Duke to make his picture. How proud he would have been in that tophat!

And what a picture it would have been. A really good picture of The Duke that captured his expression would have won a prize in almost any photography contest. It was just one of those things we put off doing and now it is too late.

But we'll never forget The Duke. Neither will anybody else who knew him. Of one thing, we're sure. He'll be the most impressive looking fellow in all of Dog Heaven.

BIRTHDAYS: Celebrating birthdays today are W. T. Moore, Marie Eisenhower, Mary Halley, Carl B. Warren, Mary Gibson Whitehead and Rosalie Prince Gates. Saturday will be the birthday of Mrs. W. H. Turlington, Guyton Smith, Gilbert Hutaff, Sallye Bryant Whitehead, Mrs. John G. Thomas and Mrs. Lillie Dorman. Celebrating Sunday will be Glenda Gail Creech.

LITTLE NOTES: Speaking of birthdays, Mrs. Ruby Newsome is a remarkable woman. "I'm 50 years old," Ruby told us the other day, "and I'm not ashamed of it at all. In fact, I'm proud of it." Now there's one woman in a million. But Ruby really doesn't look that old. WPTF interviewed Mrs. Sue Nichols Byrne of Coats via long distance telephone yesterday after Tommy pitched that winning game for the Yankees. He appeared last night on two or three different television programs.

After the World Series, the famous ball player and his Harnett wife will leave for Japan. Zebedeo Ryals, the accused Dunn Negro slayer, had changed his name to Zebbie Dies when officers picked him up in Columbus, Ga. the other day. He had remarked about six months ago, C. T. Laumer's new housing development is still growing. Grove, Washington.

Tart the storekeeper who was murdered in the holdup attempt at Fayetteville Monday night, was a native of Harnett County. He has several relatives living here. Wilson Stanley has been named to the board of directors of the Dunn Lions Club, succeeding Paul Hester, who resigned. The Lions sold more than $600 worth of Dunn High football tickets. Frank Belote was chairman of the project.

Newest members of the club are Dick Heasley and Jepp Huggins. The Rev. Don Carroll of Columbus, Ga. has been booked for revival services at the Glad Tidings Church. The revival will run from October 8 through October 23. Three new members, Mrs. E. B. Brewer, Mrs. Ida Tew and Mrs. Elizabeth Jackson, were baptized Sunday night. Lucille Arnold, the gal who makes with the pretty organ music at Johnson's Restaurant, is getting ready to spend a vacation in New York. She's busy getting tickets lined up for the Broadway shows. Dozens of local residents are planning trips to New York this fall and winter.

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Erwin is set for this coming Sunday, October 2. It will be observed in all departments of the Sunday School. At the 11 a. m. service, world-wide communion Sunday will be observed in the service of holy communion.

The first Sunday in October is observed by all Protestant churches as world-wide communion Sunday. All members, former members and friends of St. Stephen's are cordially being invited to attend.

The Young Peoples' Service League will meet for its first fall session at 5 p. m. that afternoon.

WINS HIS HEART BATTLE—Colorado's Gov. Edwin C. Johnson bids goodby to nurses Jo Volek, left, and Mrs. Agnes Miller as he leaves a Denver, Colo., hospital following his convalescence from a heart attack early in September. As Johnson leaves, expecting to return to his gubernatorial duties "in about three weeks," the long period of resting and waiting which follows a heart attack begins for recently stricken President Eisenhower.

If Friendly Shows Up Dunn Police Ready

A Lumberton Indian named Friendly Barnes, was reported to have escaped from a Roberson County prison farm where he was serving a 20 to 30 years sentence for violently attacking a crippled Dunn store operator, and robbing him of his money.

Barnes went to State Prison several months ago, and had recent gains sent to the prison farm. Just two months after he started serving his 30 year prison sentence, Barnes was made a trustee at the camp at Roberson, and allowed to go about anywhere he chose.

Barnes attacked Floyd Jernigan here in Dunn one afternoon. He went into the store, struck and knocked Jernigan down, went through his pockets and cash register.

Stealing Jernigan's car, which was parked at the curb in front of the store at East Broad Street, he made off with the money. Before leaving, he locked the door to the store to keep Jernigan from getting out, or anyone else from getting in.

Now, Friendly Barnes is loose again. He is being sought in a state-wide search, only a few months after sentencing at a trial where he pled guilty to the charges against him - and asked for mercy from the judge.

BAREFOOT BOY WITH YAMS — "Those 'aters are a bit too small on the small side," Market Manager D. H. Johnson (center) told 19-year-old Verlon Allen (left). Verlon lives on his father's farm at Dunn, Route 2, but the sweet potatoes he brought to market yesterday were his own. Asked if he made lots of money on them, he said, "I got a right good price for these here. I knew I had some bushes that weren't too good." They sold for $2.35. Buyer (right) who took Verlon's crop is Ed Norris, who works for B. A. Garrett Company, Johnson told Verlon. "If those 'aters had been a little fatter, they'd got $2.50, maybe more." Mingo Grange Prize Winner

"The Miracle of Mingo," community project to erect an agriculture building, helped win for the Mingo Grange second prize of $100 in the Grand Community Service contest for granges in North Carolina.

First place winner was Old Richmond Grange in Forsyth County while Matrimony Grange Rockingham county, won third. The first prize was $200 and a chance to compete in the National Grange contest where the top award is $10,000.

Mingo also won a plaque for taking second place. The 65 member Grange has had a number of civic projects, including securing a vocational agricultural for their strictly rural school.

Informed by the county board of education that no funds were available for an agriculture building, the Grange members themselves put up a $30,000 cement block building.

It also has engaged in many other projects for the betterment of the community.

RING RETURNS

CRESTLINE, O. (P) — Mrs. Fay Flowers lost her wedding ring 40 years ago in a haystack on the Flowers' farm near here. She was planting onions recently, not far from where the haystack once stood, and found the ring again.

Dr. Sanford Marcus of San Francisco after being reunited with his baby which was kidnaped September 18:

"The baby's fine and my wife is fine - so now we're going home and live happily ever after."

A nun at the Quebec City convent where Marie Dionne returned to resume her studies for a religious life:

"She just came back and is very happy. Her health is restored and she intends to stay."

ROUGH YEAR — Disconsolate farmer rested wearily against his baskets of sweet potatoes after getting low price for them because they were rough, had sap in them. Buyer told him, "I don't want 'em, but I'll take 'em." The farmer said, "I practically give 'em away." He drove off before his name could be learned. The price: $1.05. Prices in general were up yesterday from the opening day when $2 a bushel was the common price. But crops that have suffered from this year's wet weather don't fare well with cautious buyers. Complaining Seems To Be Crime Now PARIS (P) — Complaining, making known one's dissatisfaction, seems to be a crime these days. Apparently one is supposed to grin and bear it.

In other words, if there is a fly in your soup—don't mention it. Or if you have been shortchanged—look the other way. If you don't get the service you have paid through the nose for you must s'il give a large tip so "somebody's" feelings won't get hurt. Is this because we're sissies or haven't the courage of our convictions?

I'll tell you something that is no longer a secret: "I'm not a sissy and I do have the courage of my convictions. If I am dissatisfied, I grumble about it. Not to every Tom, Dick and Harry but to the right person—the one who can rectify it."

Sometimes that is the person who is at fault and sometimes that is the person running a business. But none of his yes-men will tell him that his business is going to pot because the goodwill has gone out of it or the quality of the product has dropped or the perfection of the service has been replaced by mediocrity. Whichever the case may be, the right person really wants to know.

You won't feel so badly about doing this if, when the opportunity with the desperate hopes of a war weary world so perfectly that the smallest concessions . . . are being eagerly seized upon as evidence of Soviet sincerity and a change of policy."

A. J. Geck, leading California Republican, on talk of GOP presidential candidates other than President Eisenhower:

"Any talk among Republicans of candidacies or succession to the presidency is presumptuous and in very poor taste."

Adlai E. Stevenson in a "great issues" lecture series at the University of Texas:

"Let us keep in mind that prosperity has two dimensions. One is its level and the other is its durability."

TO THE RECORD:

"Thanks . . . for the wonderful cooperation you've given me. 'Holiday Ahoj!' and I would have been lost without you."

In my work I come in contact with so many newspapers in small towns like Dunn, but if I were asked to name just one that was outstanding in news, world-wide besides local, friendliness, cooperation, and modern outlook. The Daily Record, Dunn, North Carolina would be my unanimous choice.

It's the spirit I guess . . . the wonderful feeling of doing service to the community . . . the desire to make Dunn grow, and the realization that the town's newspapers have a great deal to do with it's growth.

It's a man's newspaper that he reads every day that shapes his thoughts. It's the knowledge brought to him from far corners of the world, and the truth and integrity of the reporting in his own corner that makes for progress, community spirit, and the financial and moral success of his town.

I've spent many hours in the office of this newspaper, as I have done in many other papers across the country, and the warmth, interest, and human intelligence that I have found in Dunn and it's newspaper are something I shall not soon forget.
