

MIKE GETS REPORT ON FLOOD RELIEF

Centennial Celebration Big Success

Harnett County's week-long Centennial Celebration commemorating 100 years of Harnett growth and progress came to a conclusion Saturday with one of the biggest celebrations in Dunn history, and the final performance Saturday night of Paul Green's drama, "The Highland Call."

A crowd estimated at between 25,000 and 30,000 people thronged the streets of Dunn Saturday morning to witness the largest and most beautiful parade in the entire history of the town.

"It was one Helluva's parade — purtiest one I ever saw in my whole life," declared one bearded old-timer. It was twice as good as I expected."

He seemed to express the sentiments of most people, who came here from far and wide.

Mayor Ralph E. Hanna, who has been participating in parades here for two decades as mayor and fire chief, declared the crowd today was by far the largest ever to assemble here for a parade in his memory.

"In fact," he said, "it was comparable to crowds I've seen in larger cities of the State at such events."

The huge parade, which contained more than 50 units, was a colorful mixture of the old and new, with scores of floats carrying pretty girls, headed by Miss Faye Arnold, the current "Miss North Carolina."

People started lining up for the parade two hours before starting time.

Supreme Court Frees Provoos

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today freed former Army Sgt. John David Provoos, charged with treason for collaborating with his Japanese captors during World War II.

The high tribunal upheld a lower court decision that the government violated Provoos' constitutional right to a speedy trial. The 36-year-old ex-GI from Salt Lake City, Utah, has been held in custody for 5 1/2 years.

In another celebrated criminal case, the Supreme Court ordered a lower court hearing for convicted author Carly Chessman, who has held off execution in the California gas chamber for seven years through a series of legal maneuvers.

"I doubt the wisdom" he said, "of nominating a Democrat who can't carry the solid South solidly."

Congressman Carlyle made it plain that he will support the national ticket regardless of who is on it, but added, "I can see no point in the party taking chances on a loser."

He said Senator Russell would have been his first choice, but Russell has declined to run. Asked about Governor Averill Harriman of New York, he replied, "Gov. Harriman has proven that he's a man who can get votes; he has never been defeated and the party needs a vot-gettr."

Most of her new-found intimates have several qualities in common. Their creative work is public, but their ways of life are determinedly private and unpretentious.

They accept Miss Monroe with all her limitations, without making demands on her, and they are, uniformly, more eager to shield her than to exploit the friendship.

Indeed, shielding her has occasionally been necessary to forestall panic and possible mayhem. Her visits to the suburban homes of her friends can sometimes be a strain on the community honored, the host, or both.

MOB SCENE AT THE BEACHES She has divided her out-of-town week-ends among the Westport, Conn., home of her good friend and business partner, Milton L. Greene, and his wife; Strasberg's summer cottage on Fire Island; and at Rosten's summer place near Port Jefferson, L. I.

IS PRINCESS MEG'S BIG MOMENT NEAR?—Ending her summer vacation, Princess Margaret, 25, headed for London from Balmoral, Scotland, as RAF Group Capt. Peter Townsend, 40, arrived in London to spend a month's vacation from his job as British air attache in Belgium. Neither Townsend or Princess Meg, shown above in recent photos, would comment on the increasing speculation that they will be married. The pretty sister of Queen Elizabeth II has not met Townsend publicly for three years but rumors of their romance will not die down.

Big Turkey Shoot Begins Wednesday

The fire department's annual turkey shoot will begin Wednesday night, October 19, at Hanna's Pond, 7:30 p. m. Turkeys will be given away every Wednesday night until Christmas.

Contestants, who pay $1 to shoot, should bring their own shotguns. Ammunition will be furnished. Ten to fifteen turkeys will be won nightly, winners may claim them any time before Christmas.

The prize turkeys weigh about 15 pounds each. Proceeds from the shoot will be used for local charity and benefit of the fire department.

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret ended her weekend with Peter Townsend today and sped back to London for a behind-the-scenes fight that may win her more than a "second class" marriage with the dashing RAF war hero.

Margaret left Allanby Park, the nearby country home of her cousin, Mrs. John Wills, and drove by limousine back to Clarence House accompanied only by Iris Peake, her lady-in-waiting.

However, Margaret indicated there would be no marriage for at least two months, since she announced acceptance today of invitations to the Record Office.

Death Toll Is Now Over The 400-Mark

DENVER (AP) — President Eisenhower today received with satisfaction a brief report on the extensive activities of the federal government to provide relief assistance in flood-stricken areas of the East. Already, the flood has claimed 400 victims.

The chief executive received a generalized report on federal storm relief work from his press secretary, James C. Hagerly, as he awaited the arrival of Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson and Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

He was able to sit up in a chair beside his bed for 30 minutes this morning and return to his bed for a morning's sun bath on the eighth floor terrace outside his room.

He expected to confer with Wilson and Radford in his hospital room. Following an established medical routine, the President's doctors planned to have him sit up for another 30 minutes late today.

The 10:30 a.m. report on his condition said:

"The President's condition continues without complications. After a good night's rest of more than eight hours, the President awoke feeling refreshed and cheerful."

Harriman, chairman of the American Red Cross, a message informing him the Red Cross had decided not to make a disaster fund appeal at this time, but would finance disaster relief for victims of weekend floods from money on hand.

Harriman pointed out, however, that Red Cross chapters across the country would be happy to accept voluntary contributions.

These Little Things

MARILYN COULDN'T COME; WE WERE THREE DAYS LATE

Marilyn Monroe, that lovely, luscious, lovable little lady, didn't get to Dunn Saturday for the Centennial Celebration—darn it!

OK, so you say that isn't news, that nobody really expected her to come. Go ahead and laugh at the idea.

Brother, you don't know how close Miss Monroe came to paying this town a visit—real and in the voluptuous flesh, too.

But don't blame us. We tried. We did our best.

In a way, though, it's really our fault. Had we gotten a brainstorm and invited her just three days earlier than we did, the little lady probably would have been right here.

Yep, laugh again, but we invited her.

It isn't nearly as impossible as the average person might think, not by a long shot. And there's nothing bashful about us.

We just picked up the telephone and extended the invitation.

Before our good friend Dr. Leslie H. Campbell and other members of the centennial committee got the idea that we were acting without authority, let us explain that the invitation was extended solely in behalf of this newspaper and James Yates, local theatre manager. We just used the centennial as an excuse to try to get her here.

We figured that Dr. Campbell, staunch Baptist leader, might not think too highly of inviting the sexy (Continued On Page Eight)

Carlyle Lukewarm Toward Stevenson

Congressman F. Ertel Carlyle believes the Democratic Party might make a mistake if it nominates Adlai Stevenson for the presidency.

He said in an interview here that he wants the Democratic Party this time to pick a sure winner and that he has grave doubts about Mr. Stevenson.

"I certainly do not share the same enthusiasm for Mr. Stevenson now being voiced by some others in the State," declared Carlyle.

The Congressman pointed out that "Mr. Stevenson had his chance and failed. Why take a chance on him again? Why not pick a sure winner?"

LOST TOO MANY STATES

He said that Stevenson lost too many States, not only in the South but elsewhere, to justify taking a chance on him again. He also cited the fact that already many prominent Southern Democrats have come out unequivocally against Stevenson and threaten to bolt the party should he win the nomination.

"I doubt the wisdom" he said, "of nominating a Democrat who can't carry the solid South solidly."

Congressman Carlyle made it plain that he will support the national ticket regardless of who is on it, but added, "I can see no point in the party taking chances on a loser."

The Marilyn Monroe Story

PART II

For all her uncertainty, Marilyn Monroe is a woman with a good deal of native shrewdness.

With keen instinct, she has acquired a circle of friends that includes Lee Strasberg, her acting teacher; playwright Norman Rosten; actor Eli Wallach — and significantly, their wives.

Most of her new-found intimates have several qualities in common. Their creative work is public, but their ways of life are determinedly private and unpretentious.

They accept Miss Monroe with all her limitations, without making demands on her, and they are, uniformly, more eager to shield her than to exploit the friendship.

Indeed, shielding her has occasionally been necessary to forestall panic and possible mayhem. Her visits to the suburban homes of her friends can sometimes be a strain on the community honored, the host, or both.
