FAMILY AFFAIR

HARTFORD, Conn. — (AP) — Mrs. Joseph Tuzzolino and Mrs. Frank Terragna, sisters, occupied the same hospital room and on the same day each gave birth to a girl.

LONDON (AP) — The government had bad news today for Britons—higher sales taxes, less installment buying and no more housing subsidies. The reason—to combat inflation.

Chancellor of the Exchequer R. A. Butler announced the gloomy news when he went before the House of Commons and read details of a mid-year emergency budget.

The budget left income taxes unchanged. But on clothing and jewelry with a present sales tax of 29 per cent, the tax rate will go up to 30 per cent. Goods now taxed at 50 per cent go up to 60 per cent. Those taxed at 75 per cent go to 90 per cent.

30 Per Cent on Some Items
Household goods, Butler said, will be subject to the lowest tax rate—30 per cent.

Butler announced scrapping of a long list of government building projects, including plans for new British embassy offices in Washington.
