Little Things

took a quick tour of Europe... Mrs. Nathan Johnson, Sr. says she's getting a good rest now that the centennial celebration is over—she deserves it, too... We've never known anybody to work harder or more conscientiously at any job.

Much of the credit for the success of the celebration goes to her and her efforts... Nancy Suggs, beautiful daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Suggs of Dunn, is wearing a ring on her business finger... The wedding is set for November 26 and Lt. Clem Johnson is the lucky guy... She's really a pretty thing... Johnson is a brother of Alsey Johnson of Dunn... Norwood Stephenson is chairman of the Chamber of Commerce committee to hire a new manager... Steve says several good prospects are under consideration... Dr. and Mrs. Randolph Dofferyme are leaving Saturday for Asheville where Dr. Dofferyme will attend a meeting of the State Board of Medical Examiners... Doc is a member of the board that passes on new doctors.

BIRTHDAYS: Today is the birthday of Rachel (Pete) Jernigan and Sara Best... Claude E. Pope will celebrate on Saturday... Sunday will be the birthday of Marvin Edmundson, Judy Anne Welborn, Margaret Stewart and Bob Suttles.

THINGAMAJIGS: Literally hundreds of Dunn people are planning to attend the ice show in Raleigh next week... Local tobacco men point with pride to the fact that the Dunn market has broken all its previous records for volume this season... Already, sales here have passed the 11 and a half million-mark... We were talking with Lloyd Stephenson, auctioneer at E. L. Dudley's Big-4 Warehouse, about it yesterday... "There's no reason in the world," pointed out Lloyd, "Why Dunn shouldn't be a 15 or 20-million-pound market. The tobacco is here. All we have to do is to get our own people to sell it on their home market..." Local tobacco men, as well as others, blame lack of enthusiastic support from local citizens for the fact the market hasn't grown still faster... Local business men support the market all right, but not in an all-out manner in the way they should... A little more all-round support from the local citizens, point out the tobacco men, would result in the market just about doubling its size... That's certainly worth going after... Think what it would mean to the business men of this town.

MORE NOTES: If you want to see a beautiful sight, drive out to the home of Mrs. Lee Daniel Ennis on the Dunn-Erwin highway, just across from Quinn's, and see the artificial flowers she makes... You'd think you were in some sort of flower wonderland... Ted Crail, news editor of The Record, made some pictures of Mrs. Ennis for the picture feature page today and pointed out "what a wonderful face she has"... Ted says Mrs. Ennis has one of the most beautiful faces he's ever seen for a woman her age... She has wonderful facial features... Mrs. Ennis has some good-looking daughters, too... They are Mrs. Ora Lee Ennis of Charlotte and Mrs. P. H. Dalton of High Point... Mrs. Dalton is a prominent political leader who repeatedly has been urged to run for the legislature... They say she's the most influential woman in High Point... As we've pointed out before, it pays to shop in your own town before going away—it would also pay local business firms to get more advertising and let the people know what they have... Just by accident, more or less, we dropped into the Town Book Shelf here about a month ago and looked around... We were amazed at the things you can find in that wonderful little shop owned and operated by Miss Fannie Belle Smith... For years, The Daily Record has been buying art supplies out of town... One night we spent a solid hour trying to find out the name of an art supply store in Raleigh... And then we found that Miss Smith carries a complete line of art supplies—everything from brushes, oils and paints to those new paint-by-the-number sets... She carries a good line of sheet music, records—popular, classical and hillbilly—other musical supplies, books, stationery, gifts, novelties of all sorts, and literally hundreds of items that you ordinarily would expect to find only in larger cities... She has a machine for lettering and monogramming names on pencils, stationery, luggage and other items... We were delighted to find that Dunn has such a store as this.

AFFRAY TRIAL

David McLean paid a $10 fine and costs for disorderly conduct.

Bill Elliott, disorderly conduct, was fined $5.

Frank Jordan, accused of trespassing (he pled not guilty) was convicted, given 30 days suspended and told to stay away from the premises of Willy Jenkins.

In an abandonment non support case, Charles Perry Allen was ordered confined to jail for six months, sentence suspended on condition he pay $18 weekly to his wife and three minor children.

Willy Russell was found not guilty of non support.

Appearing on a charge of careless and reckless driving, Lytle G. Stephenson, pled guilty to the lesser charge of failing to yield right of way. This was accepted by the court on recommendation of the solicitor. Stephenson was released on condition he pay A. F. McFall the sum of $100 for damage.

Hubert A. Godwin was ordered to pay costs for speeding. The state not prosed.

Overtime parking actions were taken against Howard C. Hodges and Sam Baer.

Big Earnings

Steel are setting the torrid earnings pace.

Take General Motors, for instance. The world's biggest auto maker this year will become the first company ever to earn more than one billion dollars after taxes.

All along the line it's the same story: Earnings up substantially over 1954 and at or near record levels.

The mammoth Standard Oil Co.—the world's biggest oil company with operations on all six continents—also whizzed along at breath-taking speed in the earnings department.

The dynamic steel industry—producing steel at a faster clip for peace than it ever did for war—gave notice this week that it too was a force to be reckoned with.

Both U. S. Steel and Bethlehem Steel—the two biggest steel makers—reported record-breaking earnings for the first nine months of 1955, paving the way for a record year.

The trend is the same in other industries.

Who's behind this boom? You, the consumer. Americans have been on a dazzling buying spree that spells an eight million-car year for the auto makers, a 115 million-ton year for the steel industry and an almost 42-billion-dollar year for the construction industry—all new highs.

Macfadden

He specified a number of moderate requests to relatives and friends, dividing the remainder among his children, a granddaughter and the Bernarr Macfadden foundation.

As for Jonnie Lee, who was battling him in court for alimony when he died and still is fighting to get control of his estate, he said:

"I make no provisions for my wife, Jonnie Lee Macfadden, here-in for the reason that she has unjustifiably abandoned me and has left home without my consent and has failed and has refused to return to me and my home."

have time to shop all over town; so he sees an ad in the Raleigh or Charlotte newspaper and buys out of town... Throughout the years, we've noticed that the merchants who yell loudest about local citizens buying too little or not at all... and make little or no effort to keep business in town... We could name a dozen on Main Street, but no point in embarrassing them... They know it... You know who they are too—by the absence of customers there... They know full well but shut their eyes to the fact that all the big successful retailers are large and consistent newspaper advertisers... They slap success right in the face... They know, for instance, that the world's most successful retailer, Sears and Roebuck, spends 83 per cent of its entire advertising budget of about 14 million dollars annually in daily newspapers... The ratio is about the same with Macy's, Gimbels, Marshall Fields and the others... Yet, they try to argue with success and tell you how they use some other inferior means of advertising... We wonder if they're really trying to fool themselves or what—after all, they have their money invested in those businesses... Why shouldn't they try to grow and make a maximum profit?... After all, we want them to grow... We realize that the success of this newspaper depends on the success of our advertisers... The future of our town depends upon whether our business firms are progressive or complacent... A young business man who recently moved to town sized it up this way: "As I see it," he said, "some of the new and young business men either don't have the money to be progressive or have no spirit of adventure or willingness to take a chance, and some of the older ones have already made so much money they don't care"... He may be partly right... However, we think the business men in Dunn, certainly most of them, are just as progressive and far-sighted as those in any other town... Some of them have fallen victim to propaganda, of course, but they can be forgiven for that... We're mighty proud of our merchants and want them all to do well... And, with pardonable pride, may be remind you again that Dunn is one of less than 40 towns in the entire State that can boast of a daily newspaper and the only town in the entire South the size of Dunn that can boast of a newspaper as large as The Daily Record.

POINTS UP NEED—We are happy to give Miss Smith this free plug for two reasons—first, she deserves it; second, it illustrates so well what so many Dunn stores are missing by not advertising and letting people know what they sell... For example, we know scores of people who go out of town to buy Van Heusen shirts, Nelly Don and Gay Gibson dresses, and hundreds of other nationally-advertised lines simply because local stores don't advertise them and they have no way of knowing they're available here... The average person doesn't Coroner Grover Henderson added today that the distance in which the train stopped indicated the speed was not great. The engineer, W. S. Brown of Rocky Mount, said if the train he drove had been twice as long he could have stopped sooner because of additional braking power.

He saw Sorrell's car approach the tracks, Brown said, but it was going slowly and he expected it to stop.
