Predict Use of Atomic Power Will Arrive Slowly

BY PETER EDSON

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—The first comprehensive timetable on future development of atomic energy for peaceful uses has just come out. It slows down the dawn of the atomic age.

It reveals that there are no facts to support the belief that there will be another industrial revolution in the generation of electric power from atomic energy.

Twenty-five years from now, or by 1980, only 25 to 40 per cent of U.S. electric power will come from atomic energy.

Next to the production of electric power, the greatest use of atomic energy will be in transportation.

It is predicted that the first atomic-powered commercial ship—a tanken—will be in convice within 10 years.

tanker-will be in service within 10 years. There may not be an atomic-powered airplane for 10 to 15 years. It will be another 10 years before atomic planes will be economic for commercial payloads

AN ATOMIC RAILROAD LOCOMOTIVE is technically possible but probably could not be made economically feasible for a long time to come.

These are the highlights of a voluminous survey just made public by the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, whose chairman is Sen. Clinton Anderson (D.-NM).

A year ago, this committee asked a panel of eight prominent businessmen, scientists and leaders in public affairs not connected with the federal government to study the impact of atomic energy on the civilian economy. Robert McKinney, editor of the Santa Fe New Mexican, was chairman.

In 18 chapters, covering every phase of atomic energy develop-ment for peaceful uses, the McKinney Committee sticks its collective neck out with many predictions and recommendations for changing government policy on atomic energy.

IN GENERAL, the panel of experts, including Ernest R. Breech of Ford Motors and Frank M. Folsom of RCA, foresee that the atom will raise living standards. But the change will be gradual, over the next five to 25 years. Fifty thousand patients have already been treated by radioactive isotopes in the past 10 years-which are the first 10 years of the

The day may come, says the McKinney Committee, when every citizen will have to carry a record of his radiation doses, just as he now should carry a record of his blood type. But the committee predicts that radiation will probably never replace surgery in the treatment of cancer, Within three to 10 years, there will be commercial atomic radiation to preserve foods, at a cost of 3 to 10 cents a pound. This compares with 2 to 8 cents a pound for freezing foods. It is therefore oredicted that atomic radiation will have no more effect on the food-processing industry than the introduction of frozen foods.

ON A LABORATORY SCALE, the day of the "atomic-tailored" plant is at hand. This means new species of food plants, developed by atomic radiation to meet varying conditions of moisture, tem-

Atomic energy will have little use for heating homes and factories. But by 1980, 10 per cent of the process heating of metals in industry may come from atomic energy.

The effect of atomic power on coal, oil and natural gas industries, as producers of competitive fuels, is expected to be slight.
