Of Men And Money

It is generally conceded that the American woman spends most of the nation's personal income. Statistical proof is perhaps unnecessary, but advertisers figure that women make the decisions on how more than 80 per cent of the national paycheck is to be spent.

New York—I'm sorry about this—but a million and a half bucks is about all the Dutchess of Windsor can hope to get out of her life story.

DUTCHESS OF WINDSOR

It really makes you wonder why she bothered taking up writing as a career. The ink-stained Dutchess was over at a desk, in an ermine-trimmed black suit, autographing copies of "McCall's" in which the first installment appears, during this conversation at her book-launching party.

The WORRY CLINIC By Dr. George W. Crane

Freds wonders if she should marry a widower or a bachelor. As a rule, we psychologists vote for the widower, other things being equal, for widowers have already been housebroken by their former wives.

Case Q-38: Freds M., age 23, has been going with a bachelor, aged 34. Dr. Crane, you have often said that bachelors are very skittish about marriage, she began.

As a general rule, we psychologists find that widowers make better mates than old bachelors, and you can easily see why. First, the widower has already been housebroken by his former wife prior to her untimely death, so he is more understanding and usually more considerate of a wife.

Maturity is largely a result of such clashes of individual selfish habits over long years that finally lead to the broader social outlook of the happily married folks.

WIDOWERS ARE LOVERS A second reason in favor of widowers is their greater art as lovers. This again is based in part on longer experience and thus upon greater understanding of a woman's interests.

When men pal around too much with other men in clubs and lodges and fishing or hunting parties, it means they are still emotionally retarded.

Iron Curtain Jokes Give True View of Life There

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—U.S. Information Agency operatives have taken to compiling an annual Comrade Josef Miller's joke book. Whenever a Communist ality escapes through the Iron Curtain, it's copied down and pasted up. In the course of time they have a so-called humorous encyclopedia of what life is really like in the workers' paradise.

A Russian traveler came to Prague and immediately began bragging about the wonders of Soviet medical science. "We have a doctor in the Soviet Union," he told the Czech, "who operated on a blind man and gave him a new pair of eyes, so that now he can see again."

"That's nothing," said the Czech. "One of our doctors operated on a man who had lost his fingers. He was given cow's tails in their place. Now he gets milk from them."

COMMUNIST EFFORTS to get refugees to return to their homelands have been a dismal flop. The first batch of returnees had not been back long before the East German minister of health was going through a hospital. Observing a group of men hanging their heads against a wall, he asked who they were and why they said that way.

A REFUGEE REPORTS this conversation overheard in Warsaw. "No, I hadn't heard that Comrade Jan had died. In fact, I didn't even know that he had been arrested."

A new vocabulary of oppression has developed in satellite countries. Here are a few typical definitions: Communism—a form of government in which everything that is not forbidden is compulsory. White palaces—correctional prison cells. Pigeon breeders—landless peasants. Forget-me-nots—cigarettes that have to be pulled on continuously to prevent their going out. Transferred to a key industry—imprisonment. You will engage in recreation—banished to a labor camp. Holder of a dissident opinion—anyone who has escaped to a free country.

SEPARATE BEDROOMS FOR HAPPINESS, HE SAYS

This Guy Thinks Double Beds Uncivil

LONDON—Double beds and twin-bedded rooms are uncivilized, according to Dr. Marie Stopes, British birth control pioneer, poet and author of the best seller "Married Love."

Married couples seeking sound sleep and happiness should part at night, not merely in separate beds but into separate rooms, Dr. Stopes advised today.

You can often apply this yardstick, even to the middle aged married man, for when he spends an extensive amount of time away from home, it may indicate a waning sexual ardor.

Many very fine men thus are attending committee meetings or Boy Scout affairs or officiating at male clubs and bowling teams, when their more ardent brothers are home cuddling their wives.

TEST OF ADULTHOOD A virile male who has selected an attractive wife, will prefer her company thereafter to that of his own sex.

When men pal around too much with other men in clubs and lodges and fishing or hunting parties, it means they are still emotionally retarded.

They are likely to be fixated back at the "gang" age of 10 to 12 years when little boys have no use for girls and think the sun rises and sets on the male sex alone.

This is a juvenile and immature stage of emotional development, although it may be advantageous to society in some ways.

For instance many men constructively channel their latent homosexual inclinations into boys' work and similar useful functions, where as others cuddle their stein of beer every night at the tavern.

But the true adult male prefers to cuddle his wife. Girls, like the "Test for Sweethearts", enclosing a stamped return envelope, plus 20 cents. This will help weed out the adult males from the overgrown boys who have remained fixated at the 10 year emotional level.

DENOUNCES BEHAVIOR BONN—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer today denounced "intolerable" behavior by his nominal Democratic Allies which may hamstring West German rearmament, and said he may expect them from his cabinet.
