

'Waves' Will Meet Tough Lumberton

The Dunn High Greenwaves will battle a tough Lumberton cage team in a AA tilt tonight. The first varsity game is scheduled to get underway about 7:30, in the Dunn Armory.

In a preliminary contest at 6 o'clock, two of the senior class home rooms will play an exhibition game. The boys from coach Jim Brown's room will battle it out with the boys from Miss Hilda Crocker's room.

Beginning next week, the various classes in high school will play each other in regular scheduled games. The four best teams, or home rooms, will compete for the championship in a tournament during March. The plan has aroused much interest among the students in high school. The girls are trying to form teams too.

Greenwave Captain Bill Joyner, guard, Center Skeet Jernigan and forward Harry Tart will lead the Greenwave attack against the Lumberton Phisics tonight. Joyner has led the Greenwave scoring this season while Jernigan pulled down most of the rebounds. Tart, who was injured at the beginning of the season, has improved rapidly during the past few weeks and been of great assistance to the Waves.

Joe Thomas and Murphy Taylor will probably complete Dunn's starting quint. Taylor has been valuable to the Waves for his spirit and hustle. Joe Thomas, playing

Tar Heels Play Terrapins Tonite

By UNITED PRESS

Frank McGuire's Tar Heels take the route which has proven disastrous for the rest of North Carolina's 'Big Four' tonight as they face Maryland on the Terrapins' home court at College Park, Md., in the night's top Atlantic Coast Conference game.

The slow-motion Terps already have beaten Wake Forest, Duke and North Carolina State on their home court and would like to hand the high-flying Tar Heels their first defeat of the season.

In other action tonight, North Carolina State takes on Virginia in a conference game while Duke's Blue Devils play host to Pittsburgh in their last inter-sectional game of the regular season.

Both State and Duke will be heavily-favored while the nationally first-ranked Tar Heels will be about six-point favorites over the Terrapins.

Maryland, however, has a habit of knocking off favorites on its home court and tonight could see the Tar Heels drop their first game in 17 starts.

as crimes and handled by local and state courts.

"We in North Carolina are just as interested in violations of civil rights as any other part of the country and will prosecute any acts of violence," he said.

Scheidt also contended that a proposed civil rights commission might "assume the status of a super law enforcement agency."

But Celler said none of the 45 bills the subcommittee is considering gives any law enforcement powers to a proposed commission on civil rights.

urged the House to adopt a civil rights bill promptly.

In a prepared statement, Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People charged that "the right to vote has been flagrantly and systematically denied colored citizens in many parts of the South."

Wilkins said the NAACP and 22 other organizations he represented are willing to "compromise our demands" in order to break "the legislative stalemate" on civil rights.

He said they are willing to accept a "minimum" bill, providing it is "meaningful." He said "meaningful legislation should include protection for voting rights and other provisions contained in the administration's four point civil rights program.

FORMING BUREAU — Dunn is one of three North Carolina towns currently planning to form a Merchants Bureau. Thompson Greenwood, executive vice-president of the N. C. Merchants Association, announced that Roanoke Rapids and Franklin are two other towns lacking the bureaus which are currently laying plans to form them.
