SOUTH WINS SENATE CLOTURE FIGHT

Incumbents In Most States Win Primaries

Incumbents were assured of new nominations today to most of the two governorships, two Senate seats and 54 House seats at stake in primary elections in five states.

In Florida, Sen. George Smathers and Rep. Dante Fascell, who both had President Kennedy's backing, handily won renomination in the Democratic primaries. A familiar name, former U. S. Sen. Claude Pepper, won the first round of his political comeback fight with the Democratic nomination for one of Florida's four new seats in the House of Representatives.

Smathers, in Washington said he told President Kennedy of the Florida election results and said Kennedy was "extremely gratified."

Closed In Ohio

The toughest fighting was going on in Ohio, where Gov. Michael V. DiSalle was moving slowly but steadily ahead of Atty. Gen. Mark McElroy for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

State Auditor James A. Rhodes had no trouble winning the Republican nomination to oppose DiSalle in November.

Richard Kennedy of Cleveland was an upset winner in an 11-man field running for the Democratic nomination for congressman at large.

Sen. Frank J. Lausche easily won the Democratic renomination to the Senate. Toledo attorney John Briley was pulling ahead for the Republican nomination to oppose him.

State Sen. Robert A. Taft Jr., son of the late GOP senator, won the Republican primary for congressman at large from Ohio over state Sen. Lowell Fess, son of the late Sen. Simeon D. Fess.

Incumbents Win

Indiana's 11 incumbent congressmen, only five of whom were opposed, easily won renomination.

THOSE LATE SHOWS

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — Trusty prisoners in the county jail were sent to bed early Tuesday night without their usual entertainment.

DARIEN, Ga. (UPI) — Tobacco heir R. J. Reynolds and his breathing machine took the witness stand again at his divorce trial today and he charged that his third wife cost him $25 million on a stock sellout.

Reynolds also told how he hired private detectives to trail middle-aged Muriel around the world after she left Georgia on a trip he suggested.

Reynolds is trying to shed Muriel, who he claims made him sick from nagging, so he can re-wed 32-year-old Annemarie, the German doctor of philosophy he married before his divorce from Muriel came unstuck.

Reynolds said that while he was too sick to know what he was doing, Muriel persuaded him to divest himself of his holdings in the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company of Winston-Salem, N. C. At current market values, he said, this would amount to at least $25 million.

Reynolds was questioned closely by E. Smythe Gambrell, Muriel's lawyer, about the endearing words of his cables to her while she was on her detective-trailed world trip.

"I didn't want her coming back here to Sapelo Island, Ga. molesting me, so I was keeping her satisfied," Reynolds said.

Judge Stops Profanity — About one message saying he missed her, Reynolds told the jury: "You can miss a person who annoys the hell out of you." He didn't use such words again after Judge John K. Whaley warned him not to use profanity in court.

A former Dunn resident, Wade was the son of the late J. J. Wade, the town's first mayor.

Harnett Democratic Chairman Nell McK. Ross, in a letter to all candidates today, urged them to attend the county convention Saturday at noon in the county courthouse and also called on them to conduct a clean campaign in the primary and to present a united front in the general election in November.

Chairman Ross said he plans to present every candidate to the convention and give the candidate an opportunity to speak briefly.

For that reason, said Mr. Ross today, there will be no outside speaker.

But Senators Refuse To Kill Measure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate today rejected a bipartisan leadership move to curb a Southern talkathon against the administration's voting rights bill. But it overwhelmingly refused to kill the measure.

The twin actions left the measure still before the Senate. And Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, Mont., said he would make a second try for a cloture petition to halt the debate.

Mansfield made a motion to table — and thus kill the bill — immediately after the Senate rejected 53 to 43 a cloture petition. That vote was a victory for the Southern forces opposing the bill and was 21 votes short of the two-thirds required to gag debate.

Then Mansfield brought up the tabling motion, which he had introduced solely as a test of the bill itself. By a vote of 64 to 33 the Senate refused to table.

Senate leaders had settled on this strategy to force an immediate showdown on the bill because tabling moves can not be debated.

Mansfield and GOP Leader Everett M. Dirksen, Ill., had said previously that they would make the tabling motion only if the cloture move polled a majority of senators present.

But Mansfield announced at almost the last minute that the battle plan had been changed and that he would seek a test on the bill itself regardless of the outcome of the cloture move.

The two-week-old controversy centers on a bill to outlaw unfair state literacy tests and make a sixth grade education proof of literacy for voting in federal elections.

The cloture petition failed to even draw a majority vote. The vote was 53 to 43 against it.

Before the vote, Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., told the Senate there should be no mistake —
